

has acknowledged multiple violations of the D.C. Rules of Professional Conduct, and the Committee has no doubt that the misconduct established in this record is of the utmost seriousness.

Bar Counsel's charges are divided into three counts, each pertaining to a criminal investigation and/or prosecution: (i) the investigation and prosecution of Javier Card, Fonda Moore, and others (Count I, the "Card/Moore" matter); (ii) the investigation and prosecution of Mark Hoyle and others (Count II, the "Newton Street Crew" matter); and (iii) the investigation of an alleged sexual assault (Count III, the "Jones" matter). Bar Counsel and Respondent agree on many of the relevant facts and violations of the Rules and have entered into a "Stipulation of Facts and Charges" executed by Bar Counsel, Respondent, and Respondent's Counsel. Bar Counsel's Exhibit ("BX") 1. Importantly, Bar Counsel and Respondent "agree that Respondent's conduct constitutes violations of the following District of Columbia Rules of Professional Conduct for each of the three Counts":

3.3(a) false statement of material fact or law to a tribunal;

3.4(c) disobeying an obligation under the rules of a tribunal;

3.8 failing to timely disclose evidence that tended to negate the guilt of the accused;

8.4(a) violating or assisting in violating the Rules of Professional Conduct;

8.4(c) engaging in conduct involving dishonesty or misrepresentation; and,

8.4(d) engaging in conduct that seriously interfered with the administration of justice.

BX 1, ¶ 32(a)-(f). We find that each of these charges is supported by clear and convincing evidence, except for the alleged violation of Rule 3.8 in connection to the Jones matter because the Jones matter did not proceed beyond the investigative stage.

Bar Counsel has also charged Respondent with violating Rule 3.4(b) (offering a prohibited inducement to a witness) and Rule 8.4(b) (committing a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness to practice law). Respondent contests these charges.

A hearing took place on May 7-11, 2007 before Hearing Committee Number One composed of H. Bradford Glassman, Esq. (Ad Hoc Chair), Mr. John F. Barker and James T. Phalen, Esq.¹ Bar Counsel was represented by Senior Assistant Bar Counsel Elizabeth A. Herman, and Respondent was represented by Paul L. Knight, Esq., Plato Cacheris, Esq., and John F. Hundley, Esq. Respondent testified on his own behalf.

After hearing all of the evidence, reviewing the briefs of the parties, and conducting an independent analysis of prior cases, for the reasons stated below, the Committee concludes that all of the stipulated charges (other than the charged violation of Rule 3.8 in the Jones matter) are supported by clear and convincing evidence.² We also find that the contested Rule 8.4(b) violation is supported by clear and convincing evidence. We find that the contested Rule 3.4(b) violation is not supported by clear and convincing evidence.

² In addition to the exhibits introduced into evidence, the Hearing Committee has considered supplemental post-hearing exhibits. Thus, at the close of the hearing, the Chair granted Bar Counsel leave to submit redacted witness vouchers. Tr. 1489-90. On May 24, 2007, Bar Counsel filed the supplemental exhibits, marked as BX 119A-C, and which included a Master Voucher List and the vouchers. On May 25, 2007, Bar Counsel submitted the “full” BX 119B, which included a missing voucher for Detective Jack Szymczak. That same day, Respondent filed a motion to admit Respondent’s Exhibit (“RX”) 22, the missing Szymczak voucher. In addition, on May 17, 2007, Bar Counsel filed a consent motion to admit BX 120 (transcript in United States v. Pittman, Criminal Action No. F-5785-92 (Aug. 4, 1992)) and BX 121 (transcript in United States v. Pearsall, Criminal Action No. F-6355-92 (June 22, 1992)). There being no objection, the Hearing Committee grants Bar Counsel’s and Respondent’s motions to admit post-hearing exhibits and accepts BX 119 A-C, 120, 121 and RX 22 into evidence.

As to sanction, Mr. Phalen recommends the sanction proposed by Bar Counsel: a two-year suspension with a fitness requirement. But for Bar Counsel's recommendation, Mr. Phalen would have recommended disbarment. See In re Cleaver-Bascombe, 892 A.2d 396, 412 n.14 (D.C. 2006) (recognizing that although the Court of Appeals "is not precluded from imposing a more severe sanction than that proposed by the prosecuting authority, that is and surely should be the exception, not the norm, in a jurisdiction, like ours, in which Bar Counsel conscientiously and vigorously enforces the Rules of Professional Conduct."). Mr. Phalen defers to the Board on Professional Responsibility and the Court of Appeals as to whether this case represents the type of exception contemplated by Cleaver-Bascombe. Mr. Barker recommends disbarment on the grounds that the gravity of the misconduct supports the exception contemplated in Cleaver-Bascombe and an upward departure from Bar Counsel's recommended sanction.

Before turning to the violations, we set forth our findings of fact.

FINDINGS OF FACT

A. Background

1. Respondent is a member of the District of Columbia Bar, having been admitted on October 5, 1992, and assigned Bar Number 434709. BX 1, ¶ 1.

2. From on or about March 26, 1984 until May 26, 1995, Respondent was an Assistant United States Attorney ("AUSA") in the United States Attorney's Office for the District of Columbia ("the USAO"). As an AUSA, he was responsible for prosecuting persons charged with federal and/or local crimes. BX 1, ¶ 2.

3. From on or about September 8, 1993 to April 11, 1994, Respondent prosecuted Javier Card and Fonda Moore ("Card/Moore case") and other associated criminal defendants before the Honorable Herbert B. Dixon, Jr., in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia for, inter alia, drug conspiracy, murder and murder conspiracy charges that emanated from an extensive, multi-year investigation. United States v. Card, et al. (F-7682-91). Respondent was the sole prosecutor in this complex, seven-month, multi-defendant trial, involving more than 30 government witnesses. BX 1, ¶¶ 5, 15.

4. Three of the Card/Moore defendants were convicted at trial, and received the following sentences:

Antoine Rice, 40 years to life (mandatory minimum of 25 years);

Javier Card, 69 years to life;

Jerome Edwards, 61 years to life (mandatory minimum of 30 years).

BX 1, ¶ 19.

5. The day after the conclusion of the Card/Moore trial, Respondent (as lead prosecutor) and two other AUSAs began a trial before the Honorable Thomas Penfield Jackson in the United States District Court for the District of Columbia against Mark Hoyle and co-defendants who were alleged to be the leadership of a violent drug gang called “the Newton Street Crew.” United States v. Hoyle, et al. (Cr. 92-284). We refer to this as “the Newton Street Crew case.” The government brought continuing criminal enterprise, RICO conspiracy, drug conspiracy, murder and murder conspiracy charges against the Newton Street Crew defendants. The trial concluded six months later, on October 13, 1994, and was the culmination of an extensive, multi-year investigation by Respondent and numerous detectives, agents and officers dating back to the late 1980s, as well as several prior, related prosecutions of Newton Street Crew members by Respondent. BX 1, ¶¶ 6, 21.

B. Findings Relating to Witness Vouchers Generally

6. As a prosecutor, Respondent had access to federal government fact witness vouchers (“federal vouchers”). By law, Respondent was authorized to provide federal vouchers to fact witnesses, associated with federal cases, to compensate them for attendance at certain judicial proceedings in federal court matters. The term “judicial proceeding” was defined by federal regulations, and included “pre-trial conferences.” BX 1, ¶ 3.

7. Before payment is made on a federal voucher, the federal voucher must include the name of the relevant criminal case, the witness’ name, dates of attendance and the prosecutor’s signature authorizing payment. Each federal voucher requires that the prosecutor sign the voucher certifying that, “the witness named above attended in the case or matter indicated and is entitled to the statutory allowance of attendance and travel.” BX 1, ¶ 4.

8. As a prosecutor, Respondent also had access to Superior Court witness vouchers for use in connection with Superior Court cases or investigations. Federal vouchers are not authorized to be distributed to witnesses in Superior Court matters, and vice versa. BX 1, ¶¶ 3, 10.

9. During the relevant time period, witnesses were paid $40 per day for each day of attendance in a federal case, no matter whether the witness’ attendance was for an entire day, a half day or one hour. Further, federal vouchers permitted payment for multiple days on one voucher. District of Columbia Superior Court witnesses, on the other hand, were paid by the half day, through the Superior Court, by Superior Court witness vouchers. Superior Court witness vouchers only permitted payment for a maximum of one day per voucher. BX 1, ¶ 10.

10. During the relevant time period, AUSAs received no formal training regarding the statute and regulations authorizing the payment of witness fees. Tr. 647-49. In practice, AUSAs learned how to use witness vouchers from more experienced colleagues, in what can fairly be described as “on the job” training. See Tr. 100-01, 647-49, 798-99. It seems that AUSAs were not required or expected to be aware of the content of the statute and regulations authorizing witness fees. See Tr. 102-03, 649-54, 798. Preparing witness fee vouchers was viewed as a trivial or pro forma task:

to try to put [the preparation of witness vouchers] in some context for you, this was a very routine aspect of the job, almost a, you know, a minor aspect of the job. It wasn't anything that was ever at the forefront of any kind of office policy or office training.

Tr. 650 (testimony of former AUSA David Shertler).

11. During the relevant time period, it was standard practice within the USAO for prosecutors to provide witness vouchers to witnesses who appeared at the USAO or the courthouse in order to provide information to a prosecutor or a police officer, even if that witness did not appear at trial, before the Grand Jury, or in any other court proceeding, and even if such appearance was not contemplated at the time the witness appeared at the USAO or courthouse. Tr. 613-21, 625-27. Although this standard practice may not have complied with applicable law and/or regulations, it appears that AUSAs who were Respondent's contemporaries believed that the standard practice was entirely appropriate. Tr. 233, 613-14, 616-27, 650-58, 800-02. Even Bar Counsel's witnesses confirmed that this was the case. Tr. 109-10, 114-15 (Robert Chapman, Esq.), 263-66 (Jeffrey Ragsdale, Esq.); see also Tr. 1427-29 (FBI Special Agent Denise Conrad).

12. Incarcerated witnesses were not entitled to receive witness vouchers under any circumstances. Respondent was aware of this prohibition. BX 1, ¶ 9; Tr. 1050.

C. Findings Relating to Card/Moore Witness Vouchers

13. Before, during and after the Card/Moore prosecution, Respondent improperly provided federal vouchers to government witnesses, to their friends and relatives, and to an incarcerated government witness. Respondent authorized payment to these individuals by providing federal vouchers to them, although these individuals were witnesses—or associated with witnesses—in the Card/Moore case, a Superior Court case. BX 1, ¶¶ 7, 9, 17.

14. Respondent authorized Clarice Haywood, wife/girlfriend of government Card/Moore witness Irvin Pittman, to receive $2,036 in federal vouchers under the federal court captions United States v. Hoyle and United States v. Perry covering dates between September 6, 1993 and March 22, 1995. Ms. Haywood was never called as a trial witness. Respondent knew that Ms. Haywood was not entitled to be paid by federal vouchers in a Superior Court case. BX 1, ¶¶ 17, 17(a).

15. Respondent authorized Irvin Pittman to receive $3,750.65 in federal vouchers under the federal court captions United States v. Hoyle and United States v. Perry. Mr. Pittman testified for the government in Card/Moore. He testified between October 14 and October 25, 1993, but his voucher payments covered dates between September 28, 1993 and March 22, 1995. Respondent knew that Mr. Pittman was not entitled to be paid by federal vouchers in a Superior Court case. BX 1, ¶¶ 17, 17(b).

16. Respondent authorized Leroy Pearsall to receive $5,095.55 in federal vouchers under the federal court captions United States v. Hoyle and United States v. Perry. Mr. Pearsall testified for the government in Card/Moore between October 25 and October 28, 1993, but his voucher payments covered dates between September 28, 1993 and February 14, 1995. Respondent knew that Mr. Pearsall was not entitled to be paid by federal vouchers in a Superior Court case. BX 1, ¶¶ 17, 17(c).

17. Respondent authorized Calvin Bears to receive $504.00 in federal vouchers under the federal court captions United States v. Perry Graham, United States v. El Toro Graham and United States v. Perry, although he was a witness in Card/Moore. Respondent knew that Mr. Bears was not entitled to be paid by federal vouchers in a Superior Court case. BX 1, ¶¶ 17, 17(d); Joint Corrections to Stipulations, ¶ 17(d).

18. Respondent authorized Fred Johnson to receive $452 in federal vouchers under the federal court caption United States v. Hoyle. Mr. Johnson testified in Card/Moore between November 29 and December 2, 1993, and his voucher payments covered dates between November 3, 1993 and December 2, 1993. Respondent knew that Mr. Johnson was not entitled to be paid by federal vouchers in a Superior Court case. BX 1, ¶¶ 17, 17(e).

19. Respondent authorized Theresa Bryant Green to receive $1,472.50 in federal vouchers under the federal court captions United States v. Hoyle and United States v. Perry. Ms. Green testified for the government in Card/Moore between January 11 and January 31, 1994. Her voucher payments covered dates between October 15, 1993 and May 22, 1995. Respondent knew that Ms. Bryant Greene was not entitled to be paid by federal vouchers in a Superior Court case. BX 1, ¶¶ 17, 17(f).

20. Respondent authorized Detective Jack Szymczak to receive $411 in federal vouchers under the federal court caption United States v. Hoyle. Detective Szymczak testified one day in Card/Moore, and then he returned to Philadelphia. Respondent authorized a federal voucher for Detective Szymczak that covered three days of attendance ($120) and meals and/or lodging ($173), although Detective Szymczak arrived from Philadelphia on the day of his Card/Moore testimony and completed his testimony on the same day. Respondent falsely certified attendance and entitlement on the voucher provided to Detective Szymczak. Respondent knew that Detective Szymczak was not entitled to be paid by federal vouchers in a Superior Court case. BX 1, ¶¶ 17, 17(g).³

21. Respondent authorized Jacqueline Hayes, fiancée of government witness Calvin Bears, to receive $4,376.50 in federal vouchers under the federal court captions United State v. Perry and United States v. Hoyle. The vouchers cover the dates between October 4, 1992 and March 31, 1995. Ms. Hayes was not called as a trial witness. Respondent provided vouchers to Ms. Hayes before Mr. Bears testified in Card/Moore, during Mr. Bears' testimony in Card/Moore, and in March 1995 when Mr. Bears also received an improper voucher for dates when he had been incarcerated. Respondent knew that Ms. Hayes was not entitled to be paid by federal vouchers in a Superior Court case. BX 1, ¶¶ 17, 17(h).

22. Respondent authorized retired Metropolitan Police Detective Ronald Fluck to receive approximately $4,949.50, in federal vouchers for appearances, food and/or lodging and/or mileage on 68 days between May 14, 1993 and December 15, 1993. Detective Fluck testified one day in the Card/Moore trial. Respondent provided federal vouchers to him for his assistance as a case agent. Neither Superior Court vouchers nor federal vouchers are authorized to pay individuals who provide assistance as a case agent. Respondent falsely certified on federal vouchers provided to Detective Fluck that Detective Fluck was entitled to federal vouchers, when he was not. BX 1, ¶ 18; Joint Corrections to Stipulations, ¶ 18.

³ Respondent had authorized a previous witness voucher payment of $118 to Detective Szymczak ($80 for two days' attendance and $38 for meals). See BX 1, ¶¶ 17, 17(g).; Response to Bar Counsel's Proposed Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law and Recommendation as to Sanction, and Respondent's Proposed Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law and Recommendation as to Sanction, ("Response") at 64.

23. Respondent explained that federal vouchers were issued to Card/Moore witnesses because he understood that the Card/Moore witnesses were providing information useful in the Newton Street Crew matter:

as we looked at it then, anything that walked through my door that had to do with the investigation that sprung, that became what was called the Newton Street, got paid under that caption.

That wasn't correct. That wasn't right as I understand the regulations today, but it was our practice. That is just how we did business.

Tr. 1030.

D. Findings Relating to the Newton Street Crew Witness Vouchers

24. Before, during and after the prosecution of the Newton Street Crew case, Respondent signed federal vouchers for individuals who were not entitled to such federal vouchers or who were not entitled to a federal voucher for “the matter indicated.” BX 1, ¶ 7.

25. Respondent also provided vouchers to the family and friends of government witnesses for unauthorized purposes, and to cooperating witnesses who were not entitled to such vouchers. BX 1, ¶ 9.

26. Respondent signed and provided, or had others provide on his behalf, federal vouchers totaling approximately $9,835.00 to retired Metropolitan Police Detective David Belisle for appearances on 167 days between July 13, 1993 and September 23, 1994. Detective Belisle testified on three days in the Newton Street Crew trial. Respondent provided federal vouchers to Detective Belisle not only for the three days of testimony but also for his assistance as a case agent. Respondent falsely certified that Detective Belisle was entitled to federal vouchers, when he was not. Also, Respondent failed to disclose these payments to the attorneys representing the criminal defendants. BX 1, ¶ 23.

27. Respondent signed and authorized federal vouchers for friends and relatives of incarcerated government witnesses in the Newton Street Crew case although these individuals were not entitled to federal vouchers. Respondent failed to disclose, or fully disclose, these payments to defense counsel who were entitled to know of these benefits to government witnesses. BX 1, ¶ 24.

28. Respondent improperly authorized federal vouchers for the friends and relatives of incarcerated cooperating government witness Kenneth Forgy. Mr. Forgy testified between May 4 and May 17, 1994. BX 1, ¶ 25(a). Specifically,

A. Respondent improperly authorized $3,192 in vouchers for Tarita Forgy (Mr. Forgy's sister) covering dates of attendance between August 2, 1993 and February 24, 1995; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(a)(i).

B. Respondent improperly authorized $462 in vouchers for Diane Henson (Mr. Forgy's aunt) covering dates of attendance between July 26, 1993 and September 16, 1994; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(a)(ii).

C. Respondent improperly authorized $7,518 in vouchers for Lavinia Henson (Mr. Forgy's grandmother) covering dates of attendance between July 2, 1993 and May 1, 1995; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(a)(iii).

29. Respondent improperly authorized $166 in vouchers for Nichelle Jackson (girlfriend of another government witness, Shelton Brooks Seldon), covering dates of attendance between January 4, 1995 and January 6, 1995; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(a)(iv).

30. Respondent improperly authorized federal vouchers for the friends and relatives of incarcerated cooperating government witness Lazaro Santa Cruz, who testified between May 19 and June 3, 1994. BX 1, ¶ 25(b). Specifically,

A. Respondent improperly authorized $1,164.50 in vouchers for Nancy Santa Cruz (Mr. Santa Cruz's sister) covering dates of attendance between April 26, 1993 and August 5, 1994; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(b)(i).

B. Respondent improperly authorized $4,578 in vouchers for Neko Stevenson (Mr. Santa Cruz's girlfriend and the mother of his child) covering dates of attendance between April 26, 1993 and January 25, 1995; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(b)(ii).

C. Respondent improperly authorized $442.00 in vouchers for Betty Stevenson (Lenora Cole's mother) covering dates of attendance between December 1, and December 22, 1994; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(b)(iii), Joint Corrections to Stipulations, ¶ 25(b)(iii).

31. Respondent improperly authorized $1,633.25 in vouchers for Cheryl English, (Andre Wilson's girlfriend and mother of his child), covering dates of attendance between April 23, 1993 and August 9, 1994; she was never called to testify at trial. Mr. Wilson was an incarcerated cooperating government witness who testified between June 6 and June 8, 1994. BX 1, ¶¶ 25(c), 25(c)(i).

32. Respondent improperly authorized $1,919.30 in vouchers for Maria Deolo (Don Price's girlfriend and mother of his child), covering dates of attendance between July 11, 1994 and April 7, 1995; she was never called to testify at trial. Mr. Price was an incarcerated cooperating government witness who testified between June 22 and August 3, 1994. BX 1, ¶¶ 25(d), 25(d)(i).

33. Respondent improperly authorized federal vouchers for the friends of incarcerated cooperating government witness Frank Lynch, Jr., who testified between August 9, and August 16, 1994. BX 1, ¶ 25(e). Specifically,

A. Respondent improperly authorized $8,409 in vouchers for Michelle Washington (Mr. Lynch's girlfriend and the mother of his child) covering dates of attendance between June 25, 1993 and April 6, 1995; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(e)(i).

B. Respondent improperly authorized $714 in vouchers for Frank Lynch Sr. (Frank Lynch, Jr.'s father) covering dates of attendance between June 29, 1994 and April 6, 1995; he was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(e)(ii).

C. Respondent improperly authorized $1,008 in vouchers for Karen Lynch (Frank Lynch, Jr.'s sister) covering dates of attendance between July 15, 1993 and July 5, 1994; she was never called as a witness. BX 1, ¶ 25(e)(iii).

D. Respondent improperly authorized $126 in vouchers for Helen Lynch (Frank Lynch, Jr.'s mother) covering dates of attendance between July 15, 1993 and July 20, 1993; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(e)(iv).

34. Respondent improperly authorized federal vouchers for the friends and relatives of incarcerated cooperating government witness William Woodfork, who testified between July 25 and July 26, 1994. BX 1, ¶ 25(f). Specifically,

A. Respondent improperly authorized $5,421.20 in vouchers for Kathleen Baldwin (William Woodfork's grandmother) for dates of attendance between July 2, 1993 and April 6, 1995; ($2,734.50 during the trial, $243.20 given one year after the trial was over, the balance pre-trial); she was never called to testify. BX 1, ¶ 25(f)(i).

B. Respondent improperly authorized $1,016.20 in vouchers for Jacqueline Young, (William Woodfork's mother) for dates of attendance between July 20, 1993 and September 1, 1994; she was never called to testify at trial. BX 1, ¶ 25(f)(ii).

C. Respondent improperly authorized $1,554 in vouchers for Michael McNeil (William Woodfork's uncle) for dates of attendance between July 26, 1993 and July 15, 1995. BX 1, ¶ 25(f)(iv).

D. Respondent improperly authorized $168 in vouchers for Anne Green (William Woodfork's aunt) for dates of attendance between July 20, 1993 and July 23, 1993. BX 1, ¶ 25(f)(v).

E. Respondent improperly authorized $178 in vouchers for Kit Beane (William Woodfork's aunt) for dates of attendance between July 26, 1993 and July 28, 1993. BX 1, ¶ 25(f)(vi).

E. Findings Relating to the Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew Brady/Giglio Violations

35. In both the Card/Moore and the Newton Street Crew cases, the government relied chiefly on the testimony of cooperating incarcerated witnesses who themselves had been participants and/or conspirators in the criminal conduct charged against the defendants. The veracity of their testimony was disputed and hotly contested throughout the two trials by the defense. BX 1, ¶ 8.

36. Benefits provided directly or indirectly to cooperating government witnesses by the government could have been relevant to the jurors' duty to determine credibility and weigh bias. Prosecutors are required by law to inform defendants of all benefits, including derivative benefits, provided by the government to government witnesses at a time when use by the defense would be reasonably feasible. See Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972); Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963). BX 1, ¶ 8.

37. Respondent intentionally failed to fully disclose, or failed to disclose at all, to attorneys representing the defendants he prosecuted the fact that he provided, was providing and/or intended to provide unauthorized federal vouchers to family and friends of government witnesses, incarcerated government witnesses and former police officers associated with the Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew cases. BX 1, ¶ 9.

38. Respondent testified that he did not believe that he was required to disclose witness fee payments under Giglio or Brady, and that he would have opposed any defense request for production of witness voucher information specifically. Tr. 1294-95.

39. However, Respondent testified that the total dollar value of vouchers a witness received "would have made a difference" to him as to whether the information should be disclosed. Tr. 1298. Indeed, Respondent admitted that in the Newton Street Crew case, he considered whether he should disclose the amount of witness vouchers to the presiding judge, Judge Jackson, to get his view as to whether disclosure was necessary. Tr. 1298-1300.

40. Rather than disclose the amounts of the witness vouchers to Judge Jackson, Respondent engaged in his own "calculus," in which he attempted to balance his disclosure obligation against his desire to protect these witnesses from harm, and his belief that defense counsel would never question these witnesses about the voucher payment because such questioning would elicit testimony alleging that the defendants had engaged in uncharged criminal conduct. Tr. 1298-1300. Respondent admitted that his decision as to disclosure was “a decision that I took out of [Judge Jackson’s] hands and I should not have.” Tr. 1299.

F. Payments to Incarcerated Government Witnesses

41. After the Newton Street Crew prosecution was completed, Respondent signed and provided, or had others provide on his behalf, federal vouchers of approximately $160 to each of four government witnesses (Lazaro Santa Cruz, Robert Smith, William Woodfork and Frank Lynch) who were incarcerated on the dates of attendance stated on the federal vouchers. All four had been government witnesses in the Newton Street Crew trial Respondent had prosecuted. Respondent knew none of them were entitled to payment on the dates specified in the federal vouchers because they were incarcerated. BX 1, ¶ 22; Tr. 1140, 1144-46.

42. Respondent knew that in order to receive the payment authorized by the vouchers, Messrs. Santa Cruz, Smith, Woodfork and Lynch would have to falsely attest that they were entitled to payment. Tr. 1146.

43. As discussed in paragraph 17, Respondent authorized Calvin Bears to receive $504.00 in federal vouchers under the federal court captions United States v. Perry Graham, United States v. El Toro Graham and United States v. Perry, although he was a witness in Card/Moore. Of the total funds paid to Mr. Bears, $160 covered dates when he was incarcerated. BX 1, ¶ 17(d); Tr. 1130-32. Respondent knew that Mr. Bears was not entitled to receive any witness fee for the days on which he was incarcerated, but he “weighed what [he] knew about incarcerated witnesses [not being entitled to witness fees] against safety concerns that were revealed to [him].” Tr. 1132.

44. Respondent testified that he issued vouchers to all of the previously incarcerated witnesses because he feared for their safety:

On the day the three Newton Street people were released and Mr. Bears, there was no federal funds available. None of them ever wanted to leave the city. In the case of the Newton Street people they had been promised a large sum of money, thousands of dollars to be able to start a new life. That money was not available on the day they got out and given my experience with everything I have been through, including losing an informant and knowing of the families, I gave them—I authorized what turned out to be $160 for the day they got out. I believe that the day they got out they were entitled to a witness fee because I was discussing with them a case that had not been indicted, but that is neither here nor there. What I was doing was making sure that those individuals, at least for the first day, until they got their bearings, didn't go home and walk into getting killed.

Tr. 1051-52.

G. Post-Conviction Proceedings

45. On March 1, 1996, the Office of Professional Responsibility of the Department of Justice (“OPR”) opened an investigation into allegations of misconduct during the Newton Street Crew prosecution. On or about February 9, 1998, OPR concluded its investigation and found that Respondent had committed misconduct. BX 1, ¶ 12.

46. Although OPR found that Respondent was pursuing legitimate goals and did not personally profit from the use of vouchers, OPR concluded that Respondent significantly misused government funds by his issuance of improper federal vouchers and that he committed intentional professional misconduct. OPR concluded that Respondent “distributed the vouchers in ways that went so far beyond the limits of appropriate conduct as to constitute flagrant abuse of the system.” OPR concluded that Respondent “used the government’s witness fee funds as a discretionary source of money to be paid out virtually at will.” BX 1, ¶ 13.

47. In 1996, OPR disclosed their initiation of an investigation into allegations of misconduct in the Newton Street Crew case to defense counsel in that case and to the United States District Court for the District of Columbia. Each convicted defendant filed a motion for a new trial based upon Respondent's misconduct. BX 1, ¶ 27.

48. On March 15, 2002, the government agreed not to oppose the defendants' motions and stipulated to dispositions. The District Court accepted the stipulated dispositions, vacated and dismissed numerous counts of conviction. BX 1, ¶ 27. The defendants received significant sentence reductions, as follows:

Mark Hoyle, United States v. Hoyle, Crim. No. 92-284

original sentence: 8 life terms, plus 25 years
amended sentence: 28 years

John McCollough, United States v. McCollough, Crim. No. 92-284

original sentence: 9 life terms, plus 85 years
amended sentence: 28 years

Anthony Goldston, United States v. Goldston, Crim. No. 92-284

original sentence: 4 life terms, plus 5 years
amended sentence: 18 years, concurrent with Superior Court sentences

Mario Harris, United States v. Harris, Crim. No. 92-284

original sentence: 5 life terms, plus 25 years
amended sentence: 18 years

BX 1, ¶¶ 27(a)-(d).

49. Defense counsel in Card/Moore became aware of the post-conviction litigation in the Newton Street Crew cases, and filed motions to vacate their clients' convictions based upon Respondent's prosecutorial misconduct. Although the government initially resisted the defendants' motions, the government ultimately agreed to stipulate to relief in the form of vacating and dismissing numerous counts of conviction and agreeing to significant reductions in prison sentences. BX 1, ¶ 19. The Superior Court agreed to accept the stipulated dispositions, vacated the convictions and re-sentenced the defendants as follows:

Antoine Rice, United States v. Rice, Case No. F 6601-92

original sentence: 40 years to life with a mandatory minimum of 25 years;
amended sentence: 5 to 15 years.

Javier Card, United States v. Card, Case No. F 7682-91

original sentence: 69 years to life;
amended sentence: 23 years to life, with the execution of all but 23 years suspended.

Jerome Edwards, United States v. Edwards, Case No. F 4437-92

original sentence: 61 years to life, mandatory minimum of 30 years;
amended sentence: 23 years to life, with the execution of all but 23 years suspended.

BX 1, ¶ 19(a)-(c).

50. Respondent had prosecuted other criminal defendants before the Newton Street Crew case and at their trials presented some of the same witnesses who later testified in the Newton Street Crew case. BX 1, ¶ 28. Two of these defendants filed motions to vacate their sentence and also convinced the government to agree to stipulated dispositions and new sentences based upon Respondent's misconduct:

Donnie Strothers, United States v. Strothers, Crim. No. 92-285

original sentence: 30 years
amended judgment: 14 ½ years

William Hoyle, United States v. William Hoyle, Crim. No. 92-285

original sentence: 30 years
amended sentence: 14 ½ years

BX 1, ¶ 28(a)-(b).

H. Findings Relating to the Jones Family

51. In addition to prosecuting the cases described above, Respondent also investigated an alleged sexual assault on a young girl. Tr. 1055. The victim of the alleged assault was Ms. Marjorie Jones' granddaughter. Tr. 1055; BX 1, ¶ 29.

52. Respondent authorized federal vouchers to be paid to Ms. Jones and her three grandchildren for 53 days of attendance between December 1, 1993 and June 13, 1995, totaling $3,603.20 for Ms. Jones (including meals and/or mileage) and $2,080.00 for each grandchild, for a total of $9,843.20 to the family. BX 1, ¶ 29. Only one of Ms. Jones' grandchildren was the alleged victim. Tr. 1055-56. Respondent authorized federal vouchers to two of the Jones grandchildren although he knew that they were not attending as fact witnesses. BX 1, ¶ 29.

53. Respondent authorized witness vouchers for the two other grandchildren because the alleged victim would not have been able to meet with Respondent without her grandmother and brothers. Tr. 1055-60.

54. Respondent provided and authorized the federal vouchers to Ms. Jones and her three grandchildren as witnesses for the Newton Street Crew case although neither Ms. Jones nor her grandchildren attended court proceedings to address Newton Street Crew matters. Respondent provided and authorized federal vouchers to Ms. Jones and her three grandchildren although they were not entitled to them. BX 1, ¶ 30.

55. Respondent signed federal vouchers dated June 13, 1995, for attendance on May 31, June 2, June 8 and June 13, 1995, to Ms. Jones and her three grandchildren. Respondent had terminated his employment with the USAO and had left that office by May 26, 1995. Respondent authorized these federal vouchers for Ms. Jones and her grandchildren although he knew they were not entitled to them. BX 1, ¶ 31. Respondent acknowledges that "[t]hese vouchers are clearly improper." Response at 81.

CONCLUSIONS OF LAW

Respondent has stipulated that his conduct violated the following District of Columbia Rules of Professional Conduct for each of the three Counts (Card/Moore, Newton Street Crew and the Jones matter):

a) Rule 3.3(a), in that Respondent knowingly made a false statement of material fact or law to a tribunal (BX 1, ¶ 32(a));

b) Rule 3.4(c), in that Respondent knowingly disobeyed an obligation under the Rules of a tribunal (BX 1, ¶ 32(b));

c) Rule 3.8(e), in that Respondent, in a criminal case, intentionally failed to disclose to the defense, upon request and at a time when use by the defense was reasonably feasible, evidence or information that he knew or reasonably should have known tended to negate the guilt of the accused (BX 1, ¶ 32(c));

d) Rule 8.4(a), in that Respondent violated or attempted to violate the Rules of Professional Conduct, knowingly assisted or induced another to do so, and/or did so through the acts of another (BX 1, ¶ 32(d));

e) Rule 8.4(c), in that Respondent engaged in conduct involving dishonesty or misrepresentation (BX 1, ¶ 32(e)); and,

f) Rule 8.4(d), in that Respondent engaged in conduct that seriously interfered with the administration of justice. BX 1, ¶ 32(f).

Respondent has not stipulated to and has denied violating Rules 3.4(b) and 8.4(b) as charged by Bar Counsel. We address these charges below.

Although the parties have stipulated to many facts and six Rule violations, the Stipulations do not describe how Respondent's conduct violated the Rules. The parties fundamentally differ as to what the Stipulations mean, with Respondent perceiving only technical violations in areas where Bar Counsel alleges serious, substantive, and deliberate ethical breaches. Many of the points in contention revolve around disputed factual conclusions or applications of law to facts. For example,

- (i) was Respondent's issuance of witness vouchers to cooperating individuals who were not expected to testify (hereinafter, "non-testifying cooperators") itself a sufficiently clear abuse of the witness voucher process to constitute ethical misconduct?
- (ii) did witness vouchers issued to government witnesses and their relatives reflect compensation for visits to the USAO to provide case-related information or indirect financial inducements or other efforts to influence the witnesses? and
- (iii) was Respondent's authorization of witness payments in connection with the Card/Moore (Superior Court) case on federal vouchers under Newton Street Crew (U.S. District Court) case captions part of a deliberate effort to thwart evidence-gathering efforts by the Card/Moore defendants and their counsel or simply a (concededly improper) time-saving shortcut?

In light of these Stipulations and other evidence presented during the hearing, we find that Bar Counsel has established each of the stipulated violations for each of the three Counts in the Specification of Charges, with the exception of the charged violation of Rule 3.8 in connection with the Jones matter. Even though Respondent has stipulated to this violation, we cannot conclude that in connection with the Jones matter, Respondent "intentionally failed to disclose to the defense, upon request and at a time when use by the defense was reasonably feasible, evidence or information that he knew or reasonably should have known tended to negate the guilt of the accused," because the Jones matter involved an investigation, not a trial. There was no defendant to receive the information at issue. It was not possible, therefore, for Respondent to violate Rule 3.8(e) in connection with the Jones matter.

The only questions remaining for the Hearing Committee regarding the charged violations are whether Respondent violated 1) Rule 3.4(b), by offering a prohibited inducement to a witness; or 2) Rule 8.4(b), by committing a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness. As is fully set out below, we do not find by clear and convincing evidence that Respondent offered a prohibited inducement to a witness. However, we do find by clear and convincing evidence that Respondent's conduct constituted false statements and certifications in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1001 and 1018—criminal acts that reflect adversely on his honesty, trustworthiness or fitness—when he

1) signed vouchers for incarcerated witnesses even though he knew that those witnesses were not entitled to receive vouchers;

2) used vouchers to compensate retired police detectives Fluck and Belisle for their work as “case agents”;

3) used witness vouchers to compensate two Jones children who were not fact witnesses; and,

4) used vouchers to compensate the Jones family for dates of supposed meetings with Respondent after he left the USAO.

I. Nature of Misconduct Alleged

Bar Counsel's case focuses on seven principal types of allegedly unethical conduct:

(i) issuing witness vouchers to non-testifying cooperators;

(ii) issuing large quantities of witness vouchers to government witnesses for days on which the witnesses did not testify, and issuing large quantities of witness vouchers to those closely associated with government witnesses;

(iii) “miscaptioning” witness vouchers, that is issuing District of Columbia Superior Court vouchers to witnesses in connection with a matter in the United States District Court;

(iv) using witness vouchers to compensate two retired police detectives for serving as “case agents” assisting with his prosecutions;

(v) using witness vouchers to make unlawful and improper payments to prisoners for days that they were incarcerated;

(vi) using witness vouchers to make other unlawful and improper payments; and,

(vii) failing to disclose potentially exculpatory evidence to criminal defendants.

We address each of these items in turn.

1. Payments to Non-Testifying Cooperators

The parties disagree as to whether issuing witness vouchers to non-testifying cooperators (the overwhelming majority of vouchers at issue) constitutes a per se misuse of vouchers and is thus a disciplinary violation. Bar Counsel contends that the governing statutes and regulations clearly prohibit issuing witness vouchers to non-testifying cooperators; Respondent argues that the law does not clearly prohibit such payments, and that, in any event, he was conducting legitimate USAO business in accord with the well-established office practice. We first examine the legal position, then review the USAO’s practice, and then consider whether Respondent’s general practice of issuing witness vouchers to non-testifying cooperators violated the Rules.

Bar Counsel argues that 28 U.S.C. § 1821 and its implementing regulations (28 C.F.R. Part 21) prohibit issuing witness vouchers to non-testifying cooperators. See Bar Counsel’s Proposed Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law and Recommendation as to Sanction, (“Bar Counsel’s Opening Br.”) at 86-87. 28 U.S.C. § 1821 provides for payment of a specified witness fee to “a witness in attendance at any court of the United States.” 28 C.F.R. Part 21 clarifies that fact witnesses who attend a “judicial proceeding,” including a “pre-trial conference,” are entitled to a witness fee. See 28 C.F.R. §§ 21.1(c), 21.4. The term “pre-trial conference” is defined to include interviews to discuss the witness’s expected testimony. See 28 C.F.R. § 21.1(c), (d). The interview must be held prior to the date of testimony but after the date is set. See 28 C.F.R. § 21.1(d). Importantly, as Respondent concedes, the term “judicial proceeding” “does not include information or investigative proceedings conducted by a prosecuting attorney for the purpose of determining whether an information or charge should be made in a particular case.” 28 C.F.R. § 21.1(c) (emphasis added); see Response at 83.

Respondent “has readily admitted that a large percentage of the vouchers that he signed or authorized cannot be justified by 18 U.S.C. § 1821.” See Response at 3; see also, e.g., Findings of Fact (“FOF”) 14-21, 24-25, 28-34. However, Respondent argues that 28 U.S.C. § 524 also allows AUSAs to issue federal vouchers, and that it “is a very broad statute authorizing the payment of compensation and expenses of witnesses and informants beyond that permitted by 28 U.S.C. § 1821.” Response at 83; see also Response at 82. We do not agree.

Section 524(a) provides that “[a]ppropriations for the Department of Justice are available to the Attorney General for payment of— . . . compensation and expenses of witnesses and informants.” It appears in a chapter of the United States Code discussing the general powers of the Attorney General, and it authorizes expenditures out of general DOJ appropriations on a variety of items pertaining to the administration of the Department, including payments for notarial fees, stenographic services, meals and lodging for marshals “when acting as bailiffs in attendance on juries,” as well as payments to witnesses and informants. 28 U.S.C. § 524(a). Section 524 does not purport to define the circumstances in which such payments are appropriate (unlike § 1821, which, does precisely that). On the contrary, the purpose of the provision appears to be to specify the appropriate funding sources for various broad categories of departmental expenditures.

United States v. Johnpoll, 739 F.2d 702 (2d Cir. 1984), addressed a criminal defendant's argument that the United States should have to pay to bring foreign witnesses to the United States for deposition because § 524 authorized such payments. Johnpoll rejected that argument, focusing on the differences between § 524 and § 1821:

Johnpoll argues that the government's refusal to meet the foreign witnesses' demands [for certain compensation to attend a deposition] was nevertheless unreasonable because 28 U.S.C. § 524(a)(1) makes appropriations available to the Attorney General "for payment of . . . compensation and expenses of witnesses and informants, all at the rates authorized or approved by the Attorney General" and that the government in the past has pursuant to § 524(a)(1) expended thousands of dollars for witnesses in protective custody because of death threats. See, e.g., United States v. Librach, 536 F.2d 1228, 1230-31 (8th Cir.), cert. denied, 429 U.S. 939, 50 L. Ed. 2d 308, 97 S. Ct. 354 (1976) ($9,947); United States v. Partin, 493 F.2d 750, 757 (5th Cir. 1974), appeal after remand, 552 F.2d 621 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 434 U.S. 903, 98 S. Ct. 298, 54 L. Ed. 2d 189 (1977) ($26,000 for one witness; $5,000 for another). Johnpoll, however, misconstrues the purpose of § 524(a)(1). In contrast to 28 U.S.C. § 1821, which mandates that fees and allowances be paid to witnesses appearing in "any court of the United States" in an amount not to exceed certain prescribed figures, § 524(a)(1) is designed to provide funds for security of government witnesses without any such specific limit on the amount that may be spent in the case of each witness, which would obviously turn on his or her security needs. United States v. Librach, supra, 536 F.2d at 1230 (§ 524(a)(1) authorizes support payments for witnesses in protective custody because of death threats); United States v. Partin, supra, 493 F.2d at 757 (§ 524(a)(1) authorizes the government "to pay the maintenance costs of material witnesses in protective custody"). Indeed, the original Justice Department regulations promulgated under § 524, later enacted into law, 18 U.S.C. preceding § 3481 [sic], provided for the protective custody of witnesses in organized crime cases. Since the security of the witnesses was not an issue in the present case, § 524 cannot be read as authorizing or requiring the government to pay more than the 28 U.S.C. § 1821 statutory witness fees.

Id. at 710 (emphases added).

As we see it, § 524 is not plausibly read as conferring a broad and unregulated power upon AUSAs to pay witness fees. On the contrary, it appears to us that AUSAs derive their authority in respect of witness vouchers from the provisions that expressly confer and regulate that authority, i.e., 28 U.S.C. § 1821 and 28 C.F.R. Part 21, and we see no reason to doubt that they must follow the requirements set out in those provisions.

Respondent contends that the then-current United States Attorneys' Manual (USAM) supports his § 524 argument. The pertinent section of the 1988 USAM provides that, “[i]f the [pre-appearance] interview occurs during the time the witness is under subpoena, compensation is granted pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1821. . . . If the interview occurs prior to the return date of the subpoena, compensation is granted pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 524.” USAM § 1-14.111 (citing United States v. Thomas, 320 F. Supp. 527 (D.D.C. 1970)). See Response at 7. This USAM provision does not directly support Respondent’s position, as it addresses pre-appearance interviews, not interviews with non-testifying cooperators. Moreover, the USAM is merely a statement of internal DOJ policy. It does not have the force of law. See USAM § 1.1-100. Thus, the USAM cannot change the requirements of a statute such as 28 U.S.C. § 1821 or a regulation such as 28 C.F.R. Part 21, and, even if it could, the USAM language cited does not endorse Respondent’s conduct.

The 1970 Thomas decision cited in the USAM arguably addresses a non-witness’ appearance at the USAO. In that case, Judge Bryant admonished the government for issuing “phony summonses” summoning “prospective” witnesses to the USAO. 320 F. Supp. at 528-29. The court was also invited to suppress the practice of paying a $20 witness fee to such persons, and it declined to do so. Id. at 530. The government had conceded that § 1821 did not authorize the payment in question but had relied instead on 28 U.S.C. § 524. Id. Judge Bryant found the arguments and the court’s own research concerning this assertion of authority to be “inconclusive.” Id. Lacking any clear statutory prohibition, and citing the general equity and desirability of compensating citizens for their time lost in assisting the government, he declined to enjoin the payments. Id. Hence, although the USAM does not go so far as to sanction the practice of paying witness fees to non-testifying cooperators who visit the USAO to be interviewed, Thomas at least somewhat supports that position, holding that it is not clearly prohibited (at least as to a “prospective witness”). Importantly, Thomas did not apply 28 C.F.R. Part 21, which was not promulgated until 1986, sixteen years after Thomas. Thomas thus offers little or no support, in our view, for issuing witness vouchers to non-testifying cooperators after 1986.

Relying on the plain language of §§ 524 and 1821, as well as Johnpoll and the cases cited above, we conclude that § 524 does not authorize the use of witness vouchers to compensate those who are not entitled to compensation via witness voucher pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 1821 and 28 C.F.R. Part 21.⁴

Although we reject Respondent’s contention that § 524 authorized issuing witness vouchers to non-testifying cooperators who assisted his prosecutions and investigations, we accept that the Department’s statements and the USAM’s citation to Thomas may have contributed to his understanding that such payments were allowed. It is clear from the record that during the relevant time period, there was no formal training on proper witness voucher use. Tr. 647-49. In practice, AUSAs learned how to use witness vouchers from more experienced colleagues, in what can fairly be described as “on the job” training. See Tr. 100-01, 647-49, 798-99. It seems that AUSAs were not required or expected to be aware of the content of the statute and regulations authorizing witness fee payments. See Tr. 102-03, 649-54, 798. Preparing witness fee vouchers was viewed as a trivial or pro forma task:

to try to put [the preparation of witness vouchers] in some context for you, this was a very routine aspect of the job, almost a, you know, a minor aspect of the job. It wasn't anything that was ever at the forefront of any kind of office policy or office training.

Tr. 650 (testimony of former AUSA David Shertler).

As discussed above, during the relevant time period, it was standard practice within the USAO for prosecutors to provide witness vouchers to witnesses who appeared at the USAO or the courthouse to provide information to a prosecutor or a police officer, even if that witness did not appear at trial, before the Grand Jury, or in any other court proceeding, and even if such appearance was not contemplated at the time the witness appeared at the USAO or courthouse. Tr. 613-21, 625-27. It appears that AUSAs who were Respondent's contemporaries believed that the standard practice was entirely appropriate. Tr. 109-10, 114-15, 233, 263-66, 613-14, 616-27, 650-58, 800-02; see also Tr.1427-29. Although we believe that this conduct was not in accord with the statute and regulations, we recognize that the practice of providing vouchers to non-testifying witnesses was within the norm for this office and had a colorable legal justification. It seems that in at least some respects, Respondent relied on standard office practice concerning witness payments to non-testifying cooperators, as did at least some of his colleagues.

Comment No. 3 to the Scope section of the Rules states that the “Rules presuppose that disciplinary assessment of a lawyer’s conduct will be made . . . in recognition of the fact that a lawyer often has to act upon uncertain or incomplete evidence of the situation.” It would be unrealistic to expect AUSAs to investigate the regulatory underpinnings of every practice and procedure of their offices. In ordinary circumstances, an AUSA should be able to rely on high-level, well-publicized policy pronouncements such as those contained in the USAM, as well as established office policies and practices concerning administrative and similar matters.

These same considerations also tend to negate the culpability requirements for the rules that appear to be implicated by Respondent’s use of witness vouchers to pay non-testifying cooperators. To establish a Rule 8.4(b) violation, Bar Counsel must establish by clear and convincing evidence “that the conduct at issue was a criminal act” that “reflects adversely on his or her fitness as a lawyer.” In re Slaughter, 929 A.2d 433, 445 (D.C. 2007). Here, Bar Counsel has charged violations of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1001 and 1018 (as to false certifications on the vouchers concerning eligibility for payment thereunder), both of which require knowing violations. See note 19, infra. A violation of Rule 8.4(c) (dishonesty) requires intentional or reckless conduct. See In re Romansky, 938 A.2d 733, 741-742 (D.C. 2007). As for the alleged violation of Rule 8.4(d), “conduct can be ‘prejudicial to the administration of justice whether it was reckless or somewhat less blameworthy.’” In re Evans, 902 A.2d 56, 69 (D.C. 2006) (quoting In re Hopkins, 677 A.2d 55, 60 (D.C. 1996)). The Court has declined, however, to find a violation of Rule 8.4(d) where the conduct “did not seriously and adversely affect the administration of justice.” In re Hallmark, 831 A.2d 366, 375 (D.C. 2003). We cannot say that Respondent’s adherence to an office policy of issuing witness vouchers to non-testifying cooperators “seriously and adversely” affected the administration of justice. All concede that such payments could have been made by the Department under other funding authorities, such as those used for informants, and the USAO evidently regarded non-testifying cooperators as eligible for witness fees for quite a number of years. In any event, absent sufficient proof of a more culpable state of mind, we conclude that Bar Counsel has not established this broad set of alleged violations.

Finally, we decline to find violations based on Bar Counsel's contention that some of the non-testifying cooperators received payments for telephone calls and not in-person conversations. See Bar Counsel's Opening Br. at 86-87. Bar Counsel relies on testimony based entirely on memoranda of two interviews recorded on FBI Forms 302 from the OPR investigation, in which Respondent and Detective Wagner allegedly acknowledged issuing witness vouchers based on telephone calls. The 302s were not moved into evidence by deliberate choice of both parties, see Tr. 1439 (“[W]e both have reasons.”), and Bar Counsel's case therefore consists of past recollection recorded testimony of Special Agent Denise Conrad, the drafter of the 302s. Cf. Fed. R. Evid. 803(5) (hearsay exception for recorded recollection read into evidence). Respondent relies on his own testimony and that of Detective Wagner, both of whom deny having made any such statement during the OPR investigation or having issued any such witness vouchers. Detective Wagner went so far as to allege that the 302s had been deliberately falsified in this respect. Tr. 909-14. Agent Conrad testified that before the 302s were finalized, they were reviewed by DOJ attorneys who had attended the interviews. Tr. 1369-73, 1396.

We consider it highly significant that Agent Conrad's testimony was based entirely on her recent review of the 302s and that she specifically and repeatedly disclaimed any direct recollection of the relevant, alleged statements by Respondent and Detective Wagner. Tr. 1376 (“Q Do you specifically remember putting that [statement attributed to Wagner] in this 302? A It's been so long, not exactly.”), Tr. 1404 (no independent recollection of Wagner interview, recollection “solely based” on review of 302), Tr.1439 (“Q So, do you remember that discussion [with Respondent re: witness vouchers for telephone calls]? A Not specifically.”). She also conceded that the 302 had never been shown to Respondent for his comments. Tr. 1395-96. Particularly in view of the possibility of error or misunderstanding, the testimony of Respondent, and the corroborating testimony of Detective Wagner, we do not consider testimony based solely on the cold 302s to constitute clear and convincing evidence that Respondent issued witness vouchers for information provided telephonically. We do not, therefore, have occasion to analyze whether this conduct would have violated the Rules.

2. Payments to Witnesses and Their Relatives

The parties disagree as to whether the record establishes that Respondent used witness vouchers to compensate government witnesses and their family members for purposes other than providing information. Bar Counsel contends that the pattern and sheer volume of payments—with tens of thousands of dollars provided to witnesses and their relatives, girlfriends, and other close associates—suggests that the payments were not for information and/or were for the witness’ benefit, even if provided to another recipient. Respondent contends that each of these payments was made to someone who provided information at the courthouse or the USAO, although he acknowledges that the visits sometimes also served the purpose of calming and providing familial support to anxious witnesses. Respondent also defines the concept of “providing information” broadly to include, for example, information about threats to witnesses, or even information that there were no such threats since the last discussion, and that all was quiet.⁵

The evidence concerning witness voucher payments to government witnesses and their relatives potentially lends itself to three interpretations:

1) Each of the payments was for a visit to the USAO or courthouse during which the voucher recipient provided case-related information (although the visit may have also served other purposes, such as providing moral support to a government witness).

2) Some of the payments were made to induce relatives to visit incarcerated witnesses to maintain their morale, but the relatives did not provide real or substantial case information.

3) Payments were, in sum and substance, unlawful financial inducements to the witnesses either directly or through their relatives and close associates.

We believe that most of the payments fall into the first category, i.e., payments for case-related information, but that at least some of the vouchers issued fall into the second category, i.e., payments for visits to provide moral support where no real information was provided. Bar Counsel's evidence does not, in our view, support the allegation of a quid pro quo or explicit financial inducement of any witness, and, although the record suggests at least recklessness in creating improper financial inducements, we do not, in the end, find clear and convincing evidence to support such a charge.

We reject Respondent's assertion that every relevant voucher was based on a visit to provide substantive information. The record is clear that Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew prosecutors wanted to shore up anxious government witnesses. Those cases were built on the testimony of a very small number of closely associated prosecution witnesses, and one witness' defection could easily have resulted in other defections, potentially undermining the government's case. The prosecutors used considerable effort to prevent this from happening through the calming influence of “leaders” among the incarcerated witnesses themselves, and through visits from family members and other close associates.

Moreover, as discussed below, the record reveals conclusively that Respondent was willing to misuse witness vouchers when he considered it expedient to do so. He used witness vouchers to pay thousands of dollars to retired police detectives who assisted him as “case agents,” hundreds of dollars to incarcerated cooperators to ease their reentry into society, and thousands of dollars to three family members of a child witness ostensibly for information about the Newton Street Crew case but in reality for their emotional support to her during interviews with him—all without any legal basis. We believe that the evidence is compelling that at least some received vouchers on certain occasions for bolstering witnesses’ resolve, not for providing information.

The OPR Report, offered into evidence and admitted without objection from Respondent, identified instances in which a witness’ relatives received vouchers for bolstering morale, not providing information. Kenneth Forgy’s grandmother, Lavinia Henson, received some $7,518 in witness voucher payments from July 1993 through May 1995, even though she never testified. See BX 1, ¶ 25(a)(iii). Mr. Forgy, described by Judge Jackson as the “killer” for the Newton Street Crew, testified on May 4-17, 1994, and was not only a key government witness – he considered himself to be a “leader” of other government witnesses. The OPR Report states that, “[a]ccording to Forgy, he was kept on the sixth floor of the courthouse on many days not just as a witness but as a leader of the other witnesses, some of whom were afraid of the defendants and the defendants’ associates.” BX 3 (OPR Rept.) at 33. The Report notes that MPD Detective Barbara Lyles said that Mr. Forgy “acted as a leader to keep the morale of the other witnesses strong and to keep them loyal to the government.” Id. The OPR

Report relates that, according to Mr. Forgy, Mrs. Henson made frequent trips to the courthouse to visit him, and, when she did, according to Respondent, she was “asked at least one question” such as “whether anything had happened with respect to threats or whether she had anything new to report.” Id. at 33-34. The Report indicates that Respondent told OPR’s investigators “perhaps one-third of the time it was the absence of information that was significant.” Id. at 34. He also indicated that Mrs. Henson sometimes visited Mr. Forgy without receiving a witness voucher and that she “always was a potential witness who could provide historical background information about the Newton Street neighborhood.” Id.

We believe that Mrs. Henson was a valuable information source. However, it is clear that many times she was not paid for providing information, but rather for bolstering Mr. Forgy’s morale. We believe that whether Respondent asked her how things were in the neighborhood and received an “all clear” response, this was nothing more than a pro forma gesture at compliance with the witness voucher rules. Certainly the amount of information exchanged did not require an appearance at the USAO. We believe that, at least to a large degree and on many occasions, Mrs. Henson was paid for her services in bolstering Mr. Forgy’s morale, not for information. See BX 3 at 33-34; Tr. 985-86 (Judge Jackson’s testimony that payments were for visits to encourage incarcerated witnesses to testify). But cf. Tr. 1283-84 (Respondent’s testimony that Ms. Henson provided information “every day”).⁶

⁶ Kathleen Baldwin’s case is more complex. She was Newton Street Crew witness William Woodfork’s grandmother, and she received $5,421.20 for 91 days of attendance between July 2, 1993 and April 6, 1995. BX 3 at 44-46. Ms. Baldwin visited the courthouse on each day of Mr. Woodfork’s testimony to speak with him and the prosecutors. Id. at 44. During these visits, Respondent spoke with Ms. Baldwin, asked her questions about her relatives who were connected to Newton Street Crew defendants and witnesses, and sought her opinions of the trial testimony she had observed. Id. The OPR considered Ms. Baldwin to be credible and indicated that she had provided some information for every voucher except one, which may have been a payment intended for Woodfork upon his release from prison. Id. On this record we do not find a violation on the basis of these voucher payments.

We believe that much the same can be said of Michelle Washington, incarcerated Newton Street Crew witness Frank Lynch, Jr.'s girlfriend and mother of his child. BX 1, ¶ 25(e)(i). Ms. Washington received $8,409 in witness voucher payments for attendance on 103 dates between June 25, 1993 and April 6, 1995. BX 1, ¶ 25(e)(i); BX 3 at 36. Ms. Washington told OPR's investigators that Respondent called her "often to his office or to the courthouse to provide information or to 'comfort' Lynch with her presence." BX 3 at 36. Although Ms. Washington "said she provided some general information about the defendants and their relatives," she said "she had no evidence about their crimes, because she had never witnessed any drug transactions or other criminal activity." Id. Respondent indicated to OPR that Ms. Washington "provided some information about the defendants and was important in helping the prosecutors maintain a good relationship with Lynch." Id. at 37. When asked at the hearing if he agreed with OPR's conclusion that Ms. Washington and others came down to the USAO not to provide information but rather to comfort their incarcerated relatives, Respondent stated that "[t]hat's one of the benefits and one of the services they did provide. But Michelle Washington was a wealth of knowledge about all the family and tensions we were dealing with. . . . So I disagree that they did not provide me with information pertinent to my case." Tr. 1284. This is not a powerful denial, and in view of the general and non-crime-specific nature of the information Ms. Washington was able to provide and the large number of vouchers issued, we conclude that these vouchers were at least in part issued for motivational rather than information-gathering purposes. On those facts, we have no difficulty finding that Respondent abused the witness voucher process; indeed, the weak gesture at compliance only underscores the pro forma character of the exercise.

The evidence is less compelling, in our view, in favor of the contention that the payments in question were in fact a quid pro quo or financial inducement to the government's witnesses. First, beyond the pattern of payments itself, discussed below, there is no evidence of any quid pro quo or agreement relating to payment between Respondent and any prosecution witness. Second, as discussed below, the only specific voucher recipients shown by Bar Counsel not to have been paid for visits to provide information (leaving aside the incarcerated individuals and "case agents" discussed below) appear to have visited to provide moral support to their incarcerated relatives. Third, in some cases it is not clear that the incarcerated witness was even aware that his relative(s) had received witness fees from the government, undermining the notion of an indirect inducement through payment to a nominee voucher recipient. See, e.g., Tr. 906-07. Finally, many of the payments long post-dated the witness' testimony and even the conclusion of the trial and thus more easily fit Respondent's explanation that these individuals had ongoing informational value.

To be sure, an inference could be drawn from the overall pattern and quantum of payments that the intention and effect were to provide financial inducements to the government's witnesses. As Bar Counsel contended at the hearing, "Respondent provided unauthorized vouchers to friends or relatives of every major civilian witness in the Newton Street Crew Case and to witnesses in the Card case." Tr. 20. Nevertheless, we do not find a quid pro quo or financial inducement from the overall pattern of payments, given (i) the closely-knit communities involved in these cases, (ii) the undisputed access of relatives and other close associates to information about crimes and threats, and (iii) the likelihood that the pattern of cooperation merely reflects the government's inroads to the community through its incarcerated cooperators. The Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew cases involved friends and relatives testifying against each other. The relatives and friends of prosecution witnesses who lived in the communities were privy to information about crimes committed by the gangs, threats against witnesses, and dissention within the families whose members were involved in the criminal organizations. These relatives were the most likely source of such information for the government, because the welfare of their incarcerated relatives gave them a reason to undertake the serious risks associated with cooperation. There is thus a plausible and innocent explanation for the pattern of payments: these were the people in the relevant communities who were known to and willing to talk with the government. And in at least a few cases, they were also the people most able to persuade the witnesses to continue their cooperation.

Nor will we infer a quid pro quo or other improper inducement from the quantum of the payments. The evidence presented to the Committee clearly depicts a “war room” type clearinghouse run by Respondent and his colleagues that processed crime and threat information on a massive scale over a period of years, served as a nucleus of activity for literally dozens of federal agents and local police detectives (as well as law enforcement officials in other cities beset by the same or related gangs), and regularly received and debriefed an array of informants, checking and re-checking any new information with multiple cooperators to ensure its veracity. Tr. 862-64, 886, 1008. Moreover, as noted, many of the payments to witnesses and their relatives came after the testimony and even the trial as a whole was completed, sometimes years later, reflecting that some of the murder cases had been severed from related drug conspiracy cases and that uncharged crimes were also being investigated through the same process. We therefore consider that the quantum of the payments is not highly probative of an intent to provide financial inducements to witnesses, even in conjunction with the large proportion of payments directed to government witnesses and their relatives. Respondent has presented a credible and corroborated account of the investigative methodologies that led to these payments, and Bar Counsel has not presented a single instance showing either a quid pro quo or even an absence of information provided to the USAO, other than the cases set out above, which appear to have involved morale-bolstering rather than inducements to witnesses.

Finally, in support of the financial inducement theory, Bar Counsel adduced comments made by Judge Jackson, who tried the Newton Street Crew cases, in post-conviction proceedings in 1999:

Let me tell you, quite frankly, [there] are some witnesses whose testimony I believe the government would not have had the benefit of had not extraordinary measures been taken to secure that witness' cooperation. They simply would not have testified but for the fact that a very sympathetic prosecutor went out of his way and tried to make life comfortable for their friends and relatives. And I can think of several witnesses right now. . . . So, I would not necessarily be prepared to accept that witness' assurance, "Oh sure, I knew that they were doing things for my grandmother, but that wouldn't influence me."

BX 107 at 8. When he testified before the Hearing Committee, Judge Jackson was unable to recall having made these comments. Tr. 982-83. When asked what the basis for his comments might have been, his response focused on the morale-boosting aspect of the payments rather than financial inducement:

Q Judge, I don't know if it would be helpful if you wanted to look at the transcript or I can just ask you to explain why you made the statement that Ms. Herman read to you that the government might not have had the benefit of certain testimony?

A Well, several examples of the expenditures I remember vividly. Two of the critical witnesses in that case for the government were two of the principal figures in the Newton Street conspiracy. One of them was a man by the name of Benjamin Forgy who was the – he was the killer for the organization. The other one was Sheldon Brooks Seldon who was the mastermind of the organization. Both of them, as I recall, were very much influenced by a grandmother who stayed in constant contact with these two guys and convinced, I'm sure not with their great reluctance, to continue to cooperate with the government and testify.

Do the right thing. There were payments made to this grandmother, which, in effect, represented the cost of her transportation to the District of Columbia and her continued contact with these two defendants. If she had not used the influence that she had, I'm not at all sure that either of them would have testified for the government.

Tr. 985-86. Given that Judge Jackson's earlier comments were conclusory and that their evidentiary basis is unknown, we do not find them sufficiently probative to support a finding under the clear and convincing evidence standard, particularly in view of the weight of evidence, including Judge Jackson's recent testimony, in favor of the morale-boosting explanation of the improper payments.

We also consider whether Respondent was reckless as to the creation of such inducements through payments to government witnesses and/or their relatives. Cf. Romansky, 938 A.2d at 741-42 (recklessness as minimum culpability for dishonesty). Although we might be prepared to find recklessness as to the creation of a financial inducement—Respondent must have perceived a risk that thousands of dollars paid to relatives would create a financial inducement to the government's witnesses—we do not find recklessness as to whether those inducements were improper for the reasons set out in section 1 above. Moreover, absent individualized proof that a particular government witness was even aware of the payments being made to his relative(s), we would not be in a position to find recklessness as to the creation of an improper financial inducement as to that witness.

In sum, we believe the evidence supports the view that Respondent issued numerous witness vouchers to relatives of incarcerated witnesses to compensate them, not for attending at the USAO to provide information in all instances, but rather for visiting incarcerated government witnesses to maintain their resolve to testify for the government. Because it involved false certifications of eligibility for payment on the District Court's witness voucher, we find that this conduct violated Rules 3.3(a) (false statement to tribunal), 3.4(c) (knowingly violating rule of tribunal), 8.4(a) (violation of Rules through acts of another), 8.4(c) (dishonesty and misrepresentation), and 8.4(d) (serious interference with the administration of justice). We do not find sufficient support in the record to find by clear and convincing evidence that witnesses or relatives of witnesses were issued witness vouchers as a quid pro quo or financial inducement to testify, although Respondent's actions may well have had that effect, and certainly risked creating that appearance. However, these payments and the appearance created by them bear on the charges relating to failure to provide potentially exculpatory information to the criminal defendants in the Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew cases.

3. Issuance of Vouchers from Incorrect Court and with Incorrect Case Captions

It is undisputed that Respondent authorized payments to witnesses, relatives or associates of witnesses, and others on federal court voucher forms under the Hoyle (Newton Street Crew) caption even though the payments authorized pertained to the Card/Moore matter in the D.C. Superior Court. See, e.g., Response at 95-96. The parties agree that this was wrong and that Card/Moore witnesses should have been paid via Superior Court forms, through the Superior Court's administrative offices, and under the correct, Superior Court case caption. Respondent explains that this was simply an expedient means of dealing with the large volume of cooperating individuals, at least some of whom had information potentially pertinent to both the Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew cases. He thus contends that these were technical violations. Bar Counsel disagrees, noting that, among other things, this practice prevented defense counsel from obtaining records of witness payments through subpoenas issued to the Superior Court's offices, because the research would be keyed to the case caption, and the responsive records would not be with that office in any event, but rather with the United States Marshals Service's (USMS) office in the District Court.

The Committee does not believe that the record establishes a premeditated scheme to thwart discovery efforts, and we credit Respondent's explanation that the use of federal vouchers in the Card/Moore matter began as a time and effort saving shortcut, albeit an improper one. At some point, however, the Committee believes that Respondent became aware that the issuance of witness vouchers out of the wrong court and under the wrong case caption was frustrating defense discovery efforts and chose to continue to conceal the issue, further frustrating those efforts. Respondent clearly knew, for example, that his opposing counsel in the Card/Moore matter were attempting to subpoena information concerning payments to government witness Theresa Bryant/Greene from the Superior Court Finance Office, see, e.g., BX 23 at 317; Tr. 453-55, 481, 519-20, yet he made no effort to notify counsel that these and other vouchers had been issued improperly out of the federal court under an entirely different case caption.⁷

The Committee believes that Respondent's overall conduct in relation to the Bryant/Greene vouchers leaves little doubt that he deliberately concealed these payments in order to thwart defendants' legitimate discovery efforts. During a colloquy before the Superior Court on December 8, 1993, defense counsel, Ms. Holt, stated on the record that she was "asking Mr. Howes for each copy of each and every witness voucher" issued to Ms. Bryant/Greene, to which Respondent replied that Ms. Bryant Greene had worn a wire on May 6, but had not been "opened as an informant." BX 22 at 305. Ms. Holt persisted: "That's not what I asked for. I asked for the witness vouchers." Id. at 306. Respondent replied that "[s]he received no witness voucher on that day.” Id. Ms. Holt demanded, “[d]id she receive witness vouchers on other days?” Id. Respondent replied that she had received witness vouchers for the three days she came to the Grand Jury. Id. Ms. Holt urged the court to allow her to review the Grand Jury vouchers, to which Respondent replied “Theresa Bryant/Greene was not an informant past the time she came to the Grand Jury. She got a standard witness fee as everybody else does when they testify before the Grand Jury. She didn’t go to work, quote/unquote, for the government until the following day. And that’s all she did. She didn’t receive anything for it, nothing was given to her. It didn’t work out. I don’t intend to elicit any of that.” Id. at 306-07. By that date, however, Ms. Bryant/Greene had received two witness vouchers for eight additional, non-Grand Jury appearances, totaling $320, and one of those vouchers had been provided to her only twelve days prior to Respondent’s contrary representations in court. See BX 33. Judge Dixon took defense counsel’s request for the witness vouchers under advisement, but he did so under the mistaken impression, left by Respondent, that there were only three Grand Jury witness vouchers at issue. See BX 22 at 306-07. At trial the following month, on January 11, 1994, Respondent elicited the following testimony from Ms. Bryant/Greene before the jury:

⁷ In fact, Ms. Holt also made Respondent aware that she had sought the Bryant/Greene vouchers in the District Court. BX 23 at 316-17. Those efforts were also unsuccessful, presumably because the vouchers had been issued not only out of the federal court but also under the Hoyle/Newton Street Crew case caption.

Q: Ma’am for that wearing a wire did you ever receive any money?

A None other than the witness fees.

Q Were you ever compensated other than your witness fee for the Grand Jury appearances? Did you ever receive any other benefits other than in terms of being a confidential informant or a special employee?

A No.

BX 24 at 331. As of the date of this testimony, January 11, 1994, Ms. Bryant/Greene had in fact received a total $480 in witness voucher payments other than for her Grand Jury appearances.⁸ See BX 33.

⁸ Respondent maintains that this testimony was “absolutely accurate” because the question and response

As discussed in more detail below, Respondent has openly acknowledged concealing witness voucher payments that he should have turned over to the defense or at least brought to the attention of the court in camera, and he has explained that he did so in an effort to protect nonwitnesses' identities. Although Ms. Bryant/Greene was a witness and her identity was known, see BX 40 at 387, turning over her witness vouchers would have created significant complications for Respondent, by potentially revealing (i) the systematic miscaptioning of witness vouchers used in connection with the Card/Moore matter, (ii) other undisclosed payments to Card/Moore witnesses out of the federal court, and possibly (iii) improper payment activity under the Hoyle (Newton Street Crew) caption, because defense counsel could be expected to try to subpoena all vouchers under that caption once the pattern of improper voucher issuance was revealed. Respondent's evasiveness in responding to Ms. Holt's questions clearly suggests to the Committee, in any event, that his intention was to mislead and distract an inquiry that was venturing close to a problematic subject. This conclusion is consistent not only with the misleading testimony Respondent elicited from Ms. Bryant/Greene, but also with his similarly evasive and misleading conduct in stating, under inquiry from opposing counsel, that government witness Calvin Bears had not received any witness vouchers, but failing to mention that Mr. Bears' girlfriend had by that time received several hundred dollars' worth of vouchers. Tr. 457-58; BX 25 at 333-34; BX 35; cf. BX 45 at 421-22, BX 46, BX 79 (eliciting testimony from incarcerated Newton Street Crew witness Forgy to the effect that he had received no benefits from the government during incarceration, where relatives had received substantial payments by time of testimony including almost must be understood as limited to compensation of Ms. Bryant/Greene as an informant. Tr. 1193-95. We find this interpretation implausible and reject it.

$4,000 to his grandmother and more than $2,100 to his sister)⁹; BX 55, 71, 72, 73, 79 (eliciting similar misleading direct testimony from Newton Street Crew witness Frank Lynch, Jr. appearing to catalog even minor benefits from the government, but omitting thousands of dollars paid to close relatives).

Although the Committee does not find clear and convincing evidence that Respondent devised the miscaptioning scheme to thwart discovery, it is clear that Respondent became aware after the miscaptioning had begun that it impeded discovery, and knowingly and intentionally persisted in concealing it, in violation of Rules 3.3(a) (false statement to tribunal), 3.4(c) (knowingly violating rule of tribunal), 3.8(e) (failure to disclose exculpatory evidence), 8.4(a) (violation of Rules through acts of another), 8.4(c) (dishonesty and misrepresentation), and 8.4(d) (serious interference with the administration of justice).

4. Payments to Retired Police Officers for Services as “Case Agents”

Respondent admits that he used witness vouchers to employ two retired police officers (who had worked with him before their retirement) as unofficial, part-time “case agents.” The facts in this regard are not materially in dispute. Although Respondent quibbled somewhat with the “case agent” terminology, see Tr. 1170-71, he stipulated that the officers were used as case agents, and in the end he does not contest that federal witness voucher funds were used to ⁹ As part of his direct examination of Mr. Forgy concerning benefits received, Respondent elicited testimony to the effect that Mr. Forgy had been moved from the Lorton Prison to the Alexandria Detention Center in Virginia, that he received lunch during meetings with prosecutors, that he was allowed one telephone call after such lunches, and that he had been permitted to visit with his grandmother “a couple times.” BX 45 at 421-22. Respondent left the impression that the prosecution had provided through its witness a conscientious recital of all benefits, even relatively trivial ones, the witness received from the government.

Even crediting, arguendo, Respondent’s contention that Mr. Forgy was unaware of the approximately $4,000 paid by the government to his grandmother by this point in time, this testimony was misleading and improper because (i) the defense should have had the opportunity to inquire into the circumstances of the payments and to probe the veracity of the contention that he was unaware of them, and (ii) there has been no contention that Mr. Forgy was unaware of the more than $2,000 paid by the government to his sister.

compensate these retired officers to assist him with his work, just as they had prior to retirement, and he admits that there was no valid legal basis for issuing these vouchers. See Tr. 1172-73; BX 1, ¶¶ 18, 23; Joint Corrections to Stipulations, ¶¶ 18, 23. We agree.

Detective Fluck testified for one day in the Card/Moore case but received 68 days' worth of witness voucher payments for appearances and expenses, totaling $4,929.50. BX 1, ¶ 18; Joint Corrections to Stipulations, ¶ 18; BX 36. Detective Belisle testified for 3 days in the Newton Street Crew matter but received 167 days' worth of witness voucher payments for appearances and expenses, totaling $9,835.00. BX 1, ¶ 23; BX 3 at 34-36. This reflects a serious abuse of the witness voucher system and a flagrant disregard for the proper disposition of the public funds accessed through the witness voucher system. As noted, witness vouchers are intended to provide a modest compensation to witnesses for their time and trouble in coming to the court to testify. Even crediting Respondent's position that payment of a non-testifying cooperator under a witness voucher was considered permissible, there was no credible basis for an AUSA, in effect, to hire a small staff of part-time "case agents" for his own professional convenience through the use of United States District Court witness vouchers.¹⁰ We consider that this conduct violated Rules 3.3(a) (false statement to tribunal), 3.4(c) (knowingly violating rule of tribunal), 8.4(a) (violation of Rules through acts of another), 8.4(c) (dishonesty and misrepresentation), and 8.4(d) (serious interference with the administration of justice). We also conclude below that these actions violated Rule 8.4(b) (criminal act reflecting adversely on lawyer's honesty).

¹⁰ We do not doubt Respondent's contention that the officers provided assistance after their retirement "out of loyalty to [him]," and it may well be that $40 per day was not viewed as full compensation for the extensive assistance apparently provided. Tr. 1031. But these facts do not make the payments proper. Moreover, they reflect that Respondent apparently viewed the voucher system as almost a private payroll.

5. Witness Vouchers Issued to Prisoners

Respondent also abused the witness voucher system by using vouchers to compensate cooperators for alleged “appearances” on days when they were incarcerated. Such payments are clearly prohibited: “[a]ny witness who is incarcerated at the time that his or her testimony is given [subject to an exception not applicable here] may not receive fees or allowances under this section, regardless of whether such a witness is incarcerated at the time he or she makes a claim for fees or allowances under this section.” 28 U.S.C. § 1821(d); see also 28 C.F.R. § 21.4(d) (“A witness in custody [subject to an exception not applicable here] is ineligible to receive the attendance and subsistence fees provided by this section.”).

Respondent knew that incarcerated witnesses were not entitled to vouchers. Tr. 1283 (“I just know that I knew incarcerated witnesses shouldn’t receive witness vouchers and I made a conscious choice in that situation for just moral reasons.”); see also See BX 1, ¶¶ 9, 17, 22; Tr. 1130-31, 1282-83. Respondent nevertheless issued witness vouchers to five prisoners who testified for the government:

- Calvin Bears, a witness in the Card/Moore trial, received vouchers totaling $504, including $160 for days on which he was incarcerated. BX 1, ¶ 17(d); Joint Corrections to Stipulations, ¶ 17(d).
- Lazaro Santa Cruz, Robert Smith, William Woodfork, and Frank Lynch, all witnesses in the Newton Street Crew trial, each received $160 worth of federal vouchers in whole or in part for “appearance” dates during which they were incarcerated. BX 1, ¶ 22.

Respondent has acknowledged and stipulated that he authorized these payments, even though he knew that such payments were not permitted. He explains his decision to issue the vouchers as follows:

I had protected them all along. I had invested hours and hours trying to get them ready to go back so that they wouldn't revert and they wouldn't get—they wouldn't get killed and I made a choice. There was no federal money there. They showed up in my office where there should have been Safe Streets Money. It wasn't available and there they stood. That's what I did.

Tr. 1283. Despite this laudatory motive, this is another example of Respondent treating the witness vouchers as if they were available to provide compensation as he deemed appropriate. He intentionally and falsely certified the eligibility of these five prisoners to receive witness fees, thereby causing the USMS to disburse to these individuals public funds to which he knew they were not entitled. We consider that this conduct violated Rules 3.3(a) (false statement to tribunal), 3.4(c) (knowingly violating rule of tribunal), 8.4(a) (violation of Rules through acts of another), 8.4(c) (dishonesty and misrepresentation), and 8.4(d) (serious interference with the administration of justice). We also conclude below that these actions violated Rule 8.4(b) (criminal act reflecting adversely on lawyer's honesty).

6. Other Improper Witness Voucher Payments

The parties agree that Respondent improperly issued federal witness vouchers in connection with an investigation relating to alleged sexual assault on a child. See BX 1, ¶¶ 29-31. Certain members of the child's family, the "Jones family," attended interviews with Respondent to provide support to her, not to provide information to Respondent. Respondent issued vouchers under the Newton Street Crew case caption, even though no one in the Jones family provided information relating to that case. Some of the vouchers, moreover, were issued after Respondent's last day on duty with the federal government. Respondent cannot explain the late vouchers but concedes that payments were made improperly to Jones family members and that he knew them to be improper when he made them. Tr.1057-60. The parties have specifically stipulated that:

29. Respondent authorized federal vouchers to be paid to Ms. Marjorie Jones and her three grandchildren for 53 days of attendance between December 1, 1993 and June 13, 1995, totaling $3,603.20 for Ms. Jones (including meals and/or mileage) and $2,080.00 for each grandchild, for a total of $9,843.20 to the family. Respondent authorized federal vouchers to two of the Jones grandchildren although he knew that they were not attending as fact witnesses.

30. Respondent provided and authorized federal vouchers to Ms. Jones and her three grandchildren as witnesses for the Newton Street Crew case although neither Ms. Jones nor her grandchildren attended court proceedings to address Newton Street Crew matters. Respondent provided and authorized federal vouchers to Ms. Jones and her three grandchildren although they were not entitled to them.

31. Respondent signed federal vouchers dated June 13, 1995, for attendance on May 31, June 2, June 8 and June 13, 1995, to Ms. Jones and her three grandchildren. Respondent had terminated his employment with the United States Attorney's Office and had left that office by May 26, 1995. Respondent authorized these federal vouchers for Ms. Jones and her grandchildren although he knew they were not entitled to them.

BX 1 at 14, 15. Respondent also acknowledged improperly issuing vouchers to the Jones family in his testimony, although he hedged his position in places as an acceptance of legal responsibility as opposed to a factual admission (in particular, in respect of the late-issued vouchers and the Newton Street Crew case captioning). See Tr. 1055-61, 1163-66. We find that the stipulated violations relating to these improperly issued vouchers are supported by clear and convincing evidence. See BX 1 at 14, 15; BX 93, 94; Tr. 93-97, 158-62, 385-88, 1055-61, 1163-66.

Respondent also issued witness vouchers improperly to Philadelphia Police Detective Jack Szymczak. Respondent stipulated specifically that Detective Szymczak testified one day in Card/Moore, and then he returned to Philadelphia. Respondent authorized a federal voucher to Detective Szymczak which covered three days of attendance ($120) and meals and/or lodging ($173), although the Detective arrived from Philadelphia on the day of his testimony and completed his testimony on the same day in the Card/Moore case. Respondent falsely certified attendance and entitlement on the voucher provided to Detective Szymczak.

BX 1 at 7, ¶ 17(g); see also BX 34; Tr. 401-04, 1304-07 (claiming he did not, as a factual matter, recall being aware of improper issuance of vouchers because he was busy with trial responsibilities). In view of the stipulations, testimony, and documentary evidence, we find Bar Counsel's charge to be supported by clear and convincing evidence as to these voucher payments as well.

We find that the conduct relating to the Jones family and to Detective Szymczak violated Rules 3.3(a) (false statement to tribunal), 3.4(c) (knowingly violating rule of tribunal), 8.4(a) (violation of Rules through acts of another), 8.4(c) (dishonesty and misrepresentation), and 8.4(d) (serious interference with the administration of justice). We also conclude below that these actions violated Rule 8.4(b) (criminal act reflecting adversely on lawyer's honesty).

7. Failure to Disclose Exculpatory Evidence

Rule 3.8 (e) provides that

The prosecutor in a criminal case shall not . . . Intentionally fail to disclose to the defense, upon request and at a time when use by the defense is reasonably feasible, any evidence or information that the prosecutor knows or reasonably should know tends to negate the guilt of the accused or to mitigate the offense . . .

Respondent has admitted to violating Rule 3.8(e) in both the Card/Moore case and the Newton Street Crew case:

8. In both the Card/Moore and the Newton Street Crew cases, the government relied chiefly on the testimony of cooperating incarcerated witnesses who themselves had been participants and/or conspirators in the criminal conduct charged against the defendants. The veracity of their testimony was disputed and hotly contested throughout the two trials by the defense. Benefits provided directly or indirectly to cooperating government witnesses by the government could have been relevant to the jurors' duty to determine credibility and weigh bias. Prosecutors are required by law to inform defendants of all benefits, including derivative benefits, provided by the government to government witnesses at a time when use by the defense would be reasonably feasible. See Giglio v. United States, 405 U.S. 150 (1972); Brady v. Maryland, 373 U.S. 83 (1963).

9. Respondent intentionally failed to fully disclose, or failed to disclose at all, to attorneys representing the defendants he prosecuted the fact that he provided, was providing and/or intended to provide unauthorized federal vouchers to family and friends of government witnesses, incarcerated government witnesses and former police officers associated with the Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew cases. Respondent was aware that incarcerated witnesses were not entitled to receive vouchers, yet he authorized vouchers for incarcerated witnesses. Respondent also provided vouchers to the family and friends of government witnesses for unauthorized purposes and to cooperating witnesses who were not incarcerated but who were not entitled to such vouchers.

32. Based upon the above-stated facts, Bar Counsel and Respondent agree that Respondent's conduct constitutes violations of the following District of Columbia Rules of Professional Conduct for each of the three Counts: . . . (c) Rule 3.8, in that Respondent, in a criminal case, intentionally failed to disclose to the defense, upon request and at a time when use by the defense was reasonably feasible, evidence o[r] information that he knew or reasonably should have known tended to negate the guilt of the accused.

BX 1 at 3, 15; see also BX 1, ¶ 16 (“Respondent repeatedly and falsely assured the court and defense counsel that he had provided all Brady and Giglio information to the defense”); BX 1, ¶ 16 (“Respondent did not fully disclose the benefits provided to the government witnesses although the defense requested such information”); BX 1, ¶ 24 (“Respondent failed to disclose, or fully disclose, these payments to defense counsel who were entitled to know of these benefits to government witnesses.”); see also BX 1, ¶ 8 (“Benefits provided directly or indirectly to cooperating government witnesses by the government could have been relevant to the jurors’ duty to determine credibility and weigh bias. Prosecutors are required by law to inform defendants of all benefits, including derivative benefits”); BX 1, ¶ 9 (failed to disclose unauthorized vouchers); Response at 17-18.

We quote some of these Stipulations in full because Respondent devotes several pages of his Response to arguing that he did not violate Rule 3.8(e). See Response at 21-25, 92-95.

Respondent suggests that:

[i]n order to establish a violation of Rule 3.8(e) in this matter and all future charged Rule 3.8(e) cases, Bar Counsel should be required to establish by clear and convincing evidence that there is a reasonable probability that, had the evidence been disclosed to the defense, the results of the underlying trial would have been different. Bar Counsel should also be required to prove the additional factor that a defendant made a specific request for the undisclosed evidence in question.

Response at 25. He then argues that:

[t]he fact of the matter is that Bar Counsel has failed to meet its burden of showing Brady materiality in the [Newton Street Crew case]. Absent such a materiality determination, it is impossible to determine whether an ethical violation occurred.

Response at 95 (emphasis added). We find that an ethical violation occurred because Respondent stipulated to it in a document he and his counsel signed. BX 1 at 17. Indeed, Respondent acknowledges at page 92 of his Response that he “has stipulated that he violated” Rule 3.8(e), yet he incongruously argues at page 95 that absent “a materiality determination, it is impossible to determine whether an ethical violation occurred.”

We cannot reconcile these arguments with the above-quoted Stipulations, and therefore we rejected Respondent’s arguments. Bar Counsel presented his case in light of Respondent’s pre-hearing stipulations, which relieved Bar Counsel of the obligation to “offer[] independent evidence of the stipulated facts.” Madison Hotel v. District of Columbia Dep’t of Employment Servs., 512 A.2d 303, 307 (D.C. 1986). Respondent has stipulated to violating Rule 3.8(e), as is his prerogative. See e.g., In re Mendoza, 885 A.2d 317, 318 n.1 (D.C. 2005); In re Steinberg, 761 A.2d 279, 283 (D.C. 2000) (“Before the Hearing Committee, Respondent conceded the violations and admitted responsibility when he stipulated to both the underlying facts and the charged violations. This made for a very brief proceeding before the Hearing Committee.”) (emphasis added). After stipulating to the violation, Respondent cannot now argue that Bar Counsel's hearing evidence did not prove that very violation. If Respondent thought that he did not violate Rule 3.8(e), he should not have stipulated to it. In the circumstances, we review Respondent's contentions only to determine whether the charge is facially inapplicable. Finding ample evidence in the record to support the charge by clear and convincing evidence, we find that Respondent violated Rule 3.8(e).

The Supreme Court in Brady, 373 U.S. at 87; held that "the suppression by the prosecution of evidence favorable to an accused upon request violates due process where the evidence is material either to guilt or to punishment, irrespective of the good faith or bad faith of the prosecution." In Giglio, 405 U.S. at 153-54, the Court held exculpatory evidence includes information that could be used to impeach the reliability of witnesses whose testimony may determine guilt or innocence. Respondent stipulated that "[b]enefits provided directly or indirectly to cooperating government witnesses by the government could have been relevant to the jurors' duty to determine credibility and weigh bias." BX 1, ¶ 8. We find that substantial cash payments to government witnesses or their close relatives through witness vouchers should have been disclosed. Respondent has admitted as much in the Stipulations above, in his testimony, and in his post-hearing brief. See Tr. 1260-63; see also Tr.1296-1300; Response at 16-18.

Respondent testified that he decided not to disclose information about the vouchers to the criminal defendants he was prosecuting.

HEARING CHAIR GLASSMAN: I'm in the middle of paragraph 8 [of the Stipulations]. It says: "Benefits provided directly or indirectly to government witnesses by the government could have been relevant to the jurors['] duty to determine credibility and w[eigh] bias. Prosecutors are required by law to inform defendants of all benefits, including derivative benefits, provided by the government to government witnesses at a time when use by the defense would be reasonably feasible."

And I take it from the fact that you've stipulated to this that you agree with that statement.

THE WITNESS: I agree with that statement.

HEARING CHAIR GLASSMAN: So benefits provided, even to a relative, could fit into that statement comfortably that that could be something that might be relevant to the jurors['] duty to w[eigh] bias, et cetera?

THE WITNESS: It could. Not in every case, but at the time of my conduct, I weighed disclos[ur]e to Judge Jackson of relatives and friends against protecting them and if I did disclose them I would necessarily put a target on them when I might not use them even in rebuttal. I weighed that against the obligation[s] as you have read them. I came down on the side of protecting my folks and it was based on the fact that no one asked me to disclose statutory witness fees and at the time I did not have any idea how much anybody, any particular person, had gotten. Counting up days and counting amounts on a day-to-day basis during the trial was something I never even thought about. I was far, far busier.

* * * *

In objective, dispassionate view, I know I should have gone to Judge Jackson and said here is the situation. Tell me whether I need to disclose it and I would have done what the Court required.

HEARING CHAIR GLASSMAN: You've anticipated my next question. I mean the weighing analysis you've just describe[d], potentially exculpatory material, potential impeachment evidence, the need to disclose it on the one hand, the need to protect witnesses or cooperators on the other, seems quintessentially to be a balancing test that a court does, not counsel. Correct?

THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.

HEARING CHAIR GLASSMAN: Okay. Normally, in practice, even at that time, it would have been perfectly natural to make that type of submission to the Court. Correct?

THE WITNESS: At that time, and I weighed it in my own mind. I can only tell you that having lost one informant and almost a second, I was terribly mindful of protecting them, and I made the wrong choice at the time.

HEARING CHAIR GLASSMAN: You were worried that if the Court made the decision that you needed to disclose that material, then those witnesses['] names would be out.

THE WITNESS: Yes.

HEARING CHAIR GLASSMAN: So you made a conscious decision to take the locus of that decision-making away from the Court?

THE WITNESS: I made a conscious decision at the time.

Tr. 1260-63 (emphasis added); see also Tr.1296-1300 (acknowledging that, although he did not believe that vouchers should normally be disclosed, the amount of witness vouchers was sufficient here to trigger disclosure obligations, and describing his conscious “calculus” not to disclose); Response at 17 (“It is the large amount of money that at least raised the spectre of possible Brady.”). In view of Respondent’s stipulation, this testimony and the rest of the record, the Committee finds that Respondent made a conscious decision to withhold Brady and Giglio information from criminal defendants during the Newton Street Crew prosecution.

Respondent contends he did not violate Rule 3.8(e) because that Rule requires that the prosecutor “intentionally fail to disclose [exculpatory information] to the defense, upon request,” and the Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew defendants did not make appropriate requests. The record does not support Respondent’s argument. The Newton Street Crew defendants filed motions specifically seeking information about witness voucher payments and other benefits provided to government witnesses and their relatives. See BX 87, 97. In response to a 1992 motion seeking “vouchers, or any other evidence of payment by [the] government” to any person supplying inculpatory information (BX 97 at 31, ¶ 8), the government represented to the court that opposing counsel “will be advised of [any] and all pecuniary benefits that the witness received as a result of involvement in this case.” BX 98 at 40, ¶ 13.¹¹ Because a payment to an incarcerated witness’s close relative could be considered a benefit received by the witness, this response was at best highly misleading.¹² A later motion directly and specifically sought evidence of “witness fees” and fees paid to “the witnesses’ family, girlfriends, close friends, and others who would benefit from the witness’ cooperation.”¹³ BX 87. The Committee views these facts as more than sufficient to establish a specific “request” triggering the ethical obligation to disclose exculpatory evidence to the defendants, even assuming, arguendo, that such a specific request is necessary to establish a violation of Rule 3.8(e).

We believe that the Card/Moore record requires the same finding. First, it is clear that there were general demands for Brady and Giglio information and extensive discussion of the government’s compliance with its obligations to provide material relating to benefits paid to government witnesses. See BX 5 (pre-opening statements, Giglio demands); BX 6 at 116-23 (same); BX 7 at 126-28 (Giglio demands re: records of payments to potential government witnesses); BX 8 at 131-32; BX 9 at 138, 140-41, 145-47; BX 10 at 149-55; BX 12 at 167-77; BX 13 at 191 (stating to court that all Giglio information regarding a certain witness, Mr. Crallie, had been turned over); BX 26 at 351-53 (further Giglio demands for witness fees); Tr. 1296. Indeed, there was intense debate about the government’s compliance with its disclosure obligations, numerous hearings before Judge Dixon, and sanctions against the government. See Card v. United States, 776 A.2d 581, 597 (D.C. 2002) (“On more than several occasions, the trial court held hearings to determine the extent of any violations, and whether or not any sanctions would follow. On two occasions, the trial court sanctioned the prosecutor for discovery violations. . . .”) (affirming convictions).¹⁴ Second, Card/Moore defendants made specific requests for witness voucher payments as to at least some witnesses.¹⁵ Defense counsel contended throughout the case that Giglio required the production of agreements, receipts, and records of approximately $16,000 in payments made to government informant and potential witness William Stewart.¹⁶ See BX 6 at 119-20; BX 9 at 146-47; see also BX 11 at 164; BX 26 at 351-52 (demanding pursuant to Giglio “the sum total of all funds he has received as witness fees”). Similar requests were made in respect of Ms. Bryant/Greene as discussed above in section 3. Respondent made misleading statements concerning benefits received by witnesses’ relatives, representing, for example, under inquiry from opposing counsel, that government witness Calvin Bears had not received any witness voucher payments, but failing to mention that Mr. Bears’ girlfriend had received several hundred dollars’ worth of vouchers.¹⁷ Tr. 457-58; BX 25 at 333-34; BX 35; see also BX 1, ¶ 16 (stipulation that “Respondent repeatedly and falsely assured the court and defense counsel that he had provided all Brady and Giglio information to the defense”). As with the Newton Street Crew matter, the record does not support Respondent’s contention that there was no

¹⁴ Ms. Holt stated that “[t]he Supreme Court I understand has said that information that the person has financial[ly] or otherwise benefitted from the Government is of critical dimension when talking about a witness,” BX 12 at 171, and Mr. Ponds contended that the defendants were entitled to records of any payments or other “favorable treatment,” broadly construed, see, e.g., BX 9 at 146-47; BX 11 at 164; BX 12 at 175-76. Respondent acknowledged that he was obligated to provide information relating to favored treatment and to update that information continuously. BX 12 at 175-76; Response at 54-55.

“request” triggering Giglio obligations in the Card/Moore matter. We find ample evidence to support the stipulated violation of Rule 3.8(e)—again, even assuming arguendo that a specific request is necessary under the Rule.

Respondent also contends that he should not be considered to have violated Rule 3.8(e) because Bar Counsel did not establish that the nondisclosures were material. See Response at 21-25, 92-95. Respondent argues that, “[i]n order to establish a violation of Rule 3.8(e) in this matter and all future charged Rule 3.8(e) cases, Bar Counsel should be required to establish by clear and convincing evidence that there is a reasonable probability that, had the evidence been disclosed to the defense, the results of the underlying trial would have been different.” Id. at 25. He further contends that the requisite materiality “can only be determined in light of the entire record of the [Newton Street Crew case]” and that “[i]t is necessary to analyze every bit of testimony of every witness in the trial as to every count in the indictment.” Id. at 94 (emphasis supplied); see also id. at 18-20. He then argues that “Bar Counsel has failed to meet its burden of showing Brady materiality in the [Newton Street Crew case]” and that “[a]bsent such a materiality determination, it is impossible to determine whether an ethical violation occurred.” Id. at 95.

We disagree. We consider that this entire line of argument is foreclosed by Respondent’s stipulation that he failed to disclose information whose disclosure was required under Brady and Giglio. If Bar Counsel ever had a burden to prove materiality in view of the language of Rule 3.8(e), he was surely relieved of that burden when Respondent stipulated to a violation of that Rule. As with the “upon request” issue raised by Respondent, we review the materiality issue only to determine if the Rule is facially inapplicable. Finding no facial inapplicability, we sustain Bar Counsel’s charge under Rule 3.8(e).

Rule 3.8(e) is violated when a prosecutor fails to turn over material “that the prosecutor knows or reasonably should know tends to negate the guilt of the accused.” D.C. R. Prof. Cond. 3.8(e) (emphasis supplied). We have no difficulty concluding, particularly in view of the Stipulation, that the withheld material in question on its face meets the standard set out in the Rule. Respondent contends that the withheld information could not have been used (or at least used effectively) in cross-examination, because (i) given the life-or-death stakes for cooperators, even substantial witness voucher payments would not be viewed as highly motivating for a witness (as opposed to, for example, a plea deal likely to reduce a sentence by many years), and (ii) such cross-examination would have opened the door to testimony concerning additional, uncharged criminal conduct by the defendants that had occasioned the investigative interviews leading to the witness payments. This argument ignores the plain language of Respondent’s stipulation that evidence regarding the vouchers could have been relevant to witness credibility:

In both the Card/Moore and the Newton Street Crew cases, the government relied chiefly on the testimony of cooperating incarcerated witnesses who themselves had been participants and/or conspirators in the criminal conduct charged against the defendants. The veracity of their testimony was disputed and hotly contested throughout the two trials by the defense. Benefits provided directly or indirectly to cooperating government witnesses by the government could have been relevant to the jurors’ duty to determine credibility and weigh bias.

BX 1, ¶ 8 (emphasis added).

Stipulation aside, had the entire pattern been disclosed as it should have been, it is by no means clear, in our view, that defense counsel would have ignored the witness vouchers in cross-examination or otherwise. See, e.g., Tr. 449-64, 529, 566. Respondent had dispensed tens of thousands of dollars in witness vouchers, many of them in a manner contrary to law, and concentrated these payments heavily on witnesses and their close relatives and associates.

Moreover, Respondent was not entitled to deprive defense counsel of that decision. See, e.g., Kyles v. Whitley, 514 U.S. 419, 439-440 (1995) (full disclosure “will tend to preserve the criminal trial, as distinct from the prosecutor’s private deliberations, as the chosen forum for ascertaining the truth about criminal accusations”); Committee on Professional Ethics & Conduct v. Ramey, 512 N.W.2d 569, 572 (Iowa 1994) (“The duty to disclose exculpatory evidence cannot be ignored because of a prosecutor’s private belief that it is beside the point.”). In view of the stipulation and the facial violation of the Rule, the Committee concludes that Respondent’s violation of Rule 3.8(e) has been established by clear and convincing evidence.

II. Rules Violated

Respondent has stipulated to violating Rules 3.3(a), 3.4(c), 3.8(e), and 8.4(a), (c), and (d) in respect of the Card/Moore, Newton Street Crew, and Jones matters. We accept these stipulations as to the Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew cases. As for the Jones matter, the Committee accepts that the Rule 8.4(a), (c), and (d) violations are supported by clear and convincing evidence, but we do not accept that the stipulated violation of Rule 3.8(e), which applies to failures to provide required information to criminal defendants, is supported by the record, because the Jones matter did not proceed beyond the investigative stage. As for Rules 3.3(a) and 3.4(c), there is a possible argument that issuing or tendering a witness voucher form with false information to the U.S. Marshals Service office in the District Court does not constitute a false statement to the court (but rather to an Executive Branch agency) or a violation of court rules as opposed to federal statutes and regulations more generally. Cf. Cleaver-Bascombe, 892 A.2d at 403-04 (identifying but finding no need to decide similar issue relating to Superior Court Financial Operations Division because CJA voucher approval vests ultimately with judge). Respondent has not made these arguments, however, but rather has stipulated to violations of these rules, and there is a sufficiently close relationship between the role played by the USMS as regards witness vouchers and the business of the court that we do not find the application of these rules to the issuance of witness vouchers facially implausible.¹⁸ We therefore sustain these charges as to all three matters.

The only questions remaining for the Hearing Committee regarding the charged violations are whether Respondent violated (i) Rule 3.4(b), by offering a prohibited inducement to a witness; or (ii) Rule 8.4(b), by committing a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness. We have already discussed the charge that Respondent offered a prohibited inducement to a witness. We concluded that the charge is not supported by clear and convincing evidence, because the only instances in which witness payments were provided other than for the receipt of information (and hence the only clearly "prohibited" payments in view of the USAO's practice at the time) involved vouchers issued to relatives of witnesses for visits they made to the USAO to provide moral support. Although we have found these payments to have been "prohibited" in that they were not an authorized use of witness vouchers, we do not believe that they constitute "inducements" to the witnesses in the sense intended by the Rule.

Rule 8.4(b) provides that "it is professional misconduct for a lawyer to commit a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness or fitness as a lawyer in other respects." We find that Respondent has violated Rule 8.4(b) by committing criminal acts bearing directly on his honesty and trustworthiness—i.e., false statements and certifications—when he used witness vouchers (i) to compensate incarcerated witnesses; (ii) to compensate retired detectives Fluck and Belisle for services they provided to him as “case agents”; and (iii) to compensate Jones family members who were not witnesses and did not provide information, including through vouchers issued after his resignation from the USAO.

¹⁸ Respondent does argue, Response at 90-92, that, despite his stipulation, a Rule 3.4(c) violation should not be found unless a Rule 3.8(e) violation is also found. Because we have found a violation of Rule 3.8(e), we need not address this argument, which in any event is technical and would not affect our sanction recommendation.

The above conduct clearly constitutes false statements and certifications in violation of 18 U.S.C. §§ 1001 and 1018.¹⁹ See, e.g., In re Goffe, 641 A.2d 458, 465 n.8 (D.C. 1994) (“Knowingly using a false writing or document in any matter with the United States or its agency is also a felony. 18 U.S.C. § 1001 (1989).”). Indeed, Respondent has admitted that “Bar Counsel has established a violation of either 18 U.S.C. § 1001 or § 1018” for his authorization of vouchers for (i) incarcerated witnesses; and (ii) members of the Jones family for purported attendance on dates after Respondent left the USAO. Response at 97-98. We see no reason to question the validity of this stipulation. We also find no basis to doubt that the other payments, under Newton Street Crew case captions, to the Jones family members who accompanied their sister but were not witnesses or informants also violated these provisions. Nor do we see any reason to doubt that such violations arose from Respondent’s payment of retired MPD police officers to serve him as “case agents.”²⁰ We therefore find by clear and

¹⁹ 18 U.S.C. § 1001 provides in relevant part that whoever, in any matter within the jurisdiction of the executive, legislative, or judicial branch of the Government of the United States, knowingly and willfully--
(1) falsifies, conceals, or covers up by any trick, scheme, or device a material fact;
(2) makes any materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or representation; or
(3) makes or uses any false writing or document knowing the same to contain any materially false, fictitious, or fraudulent statement or entry; shall be fined under this title, imprisoned not more than 5 years . . .

18 U.S.C. § 1018 provides that

Whoever, being a public officer or other person authorized by any law of the United States to make or give a certificate or other writing, knowingly makes and delivers as true such a certificate or writing, containing any statement which he knows to be false, in a case where the punishment thereof is not elsewhere expressly provided by law, shall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

²⁰ The same can be said of the excessive witness voucher payment authorized for Detective Szymczak.

convincing evidence that Respondent violated 18 U.S.C. § 1001 and 1018 in issuing these witness vouchers.

Although Bar Counsel has not charged violations under Rule 8.4(b) by reference to property crimes such as theft and embezzlement, the Committee believes that the record clearly establishes such violations. Federal law provides, for example, that

Whoever embezzles, steals, purloins, or knowingly converts to his use or the use of another, or without authority, sells, conveys or disposes of any record, voucher, money, or thing of value of the United States or any department or agency thereof

* * * *

[s]hall be fined under this title or imprisoned not more than ten years, or both; but if the value of such property in the aggregate, combining amounts from all the counts for which the defendant is convicted in a single case, does not exceed the sum of $1,000, he shall be fined under the title or imprisoned not more than one year, or both.

18 U.S.C. § 641; In re Patterson, 833 A.2d 493, 493 (D.C. 2003) (disbarment following guilty plea for stealing more than $1,000 of U.S. government property in violation of § 641). There is no doubt that Respondent conveyed or disposed of federal witness vouchers—and the public monies accessed by them—without authority and converted public funds to the use of third parties for his own, improper purposes. Although there is arguably sufficient notice to Respondent to find Rule 8.4(b) to have been violated on this additional basis, we will not rely on such a finding, which is in any event superfluous for present purposes in view of the stipulated violations.

The Committee believes that Respondent’s multiple and deliberate false statements and certifications in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1001 and 1018 plainly reflect adversely on his honesty and trustworthiness. Rule 8.4(b) by its terms requires nothing more. In contrast to the ensuing phrase “or fitness as a lawyer in other respects,” the phrase “reflects adversely on his honesty [or] trustworthiness” can be satisfied without a broader inquiry into fitness, so long as the criminal act reflects dishonesty. The comment to the Rule reinforces this conclusion:

Many kinds of illegal conduct reflect adversely on fitness to practice law, such as offenses involving fraud and the offense of willful failure to file an income tax return. However, some kinds of offenses carry no such implication. Traditionally, the distinction was drawn in terms of offenses involving “moral turpitude.” That concept can be construed to include offenses concerning some matters of personal morality, such as adultery and comparable offenses, that have no specific connection to fitness for the practice of law. Although a lawyer is personally answerable to the entire criminal law, a lawyer should be professionally answerable only for offenses that indicate lack of those characteristics relevant to law practice. Offenses involving violence, dishonesty, breach of trust, or serious interference with the administration of justice are in that category. A pattern of repeated offenses, even ones of minor significance when considered separately, can indicate indifference to legal obligation.

D.C. R. Prof. Cond. 8.4 cmt. [1] (emphasis added). We conclude that Respondent’s false statements and certifications violate the Rule where, as here, they reflect deliberate and repeated dishonest conduct. The various “moral” rationales adduced by Respondent in explanation of his actions do not alter this conclusion.

SANCTION

Bar Counsel seeks “at least” a two-year suspension with a fitness requirement. Bar Counsel’s Opening Br. at 97. Respondent argues that the sanction should be a non-suspensory public censure or a 30-day suspension, at most. Response at 111. The imposition of sanctions in bar disciplinary matters “is not an exact science but may depend on the facts and circumstances of each particular proceeding.” Goffe, 641 A.2d at 463. The facts and circumstances generally considered include: (1) the nature and seriousness of the misconduct; (2) the prejudice, if any, to the client that resulted from the misconduct; (3) whether the conduct involved dishonesty or misrepresentation; (4) the presence or absence of violations of other ethical rules; (5) whether the lawyer has had prior discipline; (6) whether the lawyer acknowledges his wrongful conduct; and, (7) any circumstances in mitigation of the misconduct. In re Pelkey, 962 A.2d 268, 281 (D.C. 2008). We treat these factors below. In doing so, we are cognizant that the discipline we recommend “should serve not only to maintain the integrity of the profession and to protect the public and the courts, but also to deter other attorneys from engaging in similar misconduct.” In re Reback, 513 A.2d 226, 231 (D.C. 1986) (en banc).

The Court of Appeals has cautioned that, although it “is not precluded from imposing a more severe sanction than that proposed by the prosecuting authority, that is and surely should be the exception, not the norm, in a jurisdiction, like ours, in which Bar Counsel conscientiously and vigorously enforces the Rules of Professional Conduct.” Cleaver-Bascombe, 892 A.2d at 412 n.14; In re Ukwu, 926 A.2d 1106, 1119 (D.C. 2007) (“our disciplinary system is adversarial, and the imposition of a sanction harsher than that proposed by Bar Counsel should be the exception rather than the norm.”); In re Christenson, 940 A.2d 84, 85 n.3 (D.C. 2007) (same); In re Powell, 898 A.2d 365, 366 n.1 (D.C. 2006) (same); In re DeMaio, 893 A.2d 583, 585 n.1 (D.C. 2006) (same). Although Bar Counsel’s recommendation could be understood as a minimum recommended discipline—i.e., “at least” two years’ suspension with fitness—Bar Counsel appears to have considered and rejected disbarment:

Normally Bar Counsel would recommend disbarment for misconduct as serious and extensive as that of Respondent. However, because the mitigating factors discussed herein [(Respondent’s stipulations and cooperation with Bar Counsel, and the delay between the charged misconduct and the institution of disciplinary proceedings)], we believe that a substantial suspension of at least two years, with a fitness requirement, would be adequate to protect the courts, the public, and the integrity and standing of the Bar.

Bar Counsel’s Opening Br. at 97; see also Bar Counsel’s Reply to Respondent’s Proposed Findings of Fact, Conclusions of Law, and Recommendation as to Sanction at 6 (“in determining what sanction to recommend, Bar Counsel took into consideration the length of time that has elapsed since the underlying misconduct, and as a result, is recommending a sanction less than disbarment.”) (emphasis added).

Mr. Phalen, the attorney member of the Hearing Committee, would have recommended Respondent’s disbarment, but believes it is appropriate under Cleaver-Bascombe to follow Bar Counsel’s recommendation of a lesser sanction of at least a two-year suspension with a fitness requirement. Mr. Phalen defers to the Board on Professional Responsibility and the Court of Appeals to decide whether a more severe sanction than sought by Bar Counsel should be imposed. The public member, Mr. Barker, recommends disbarment, notwithstanding Bar Counsel’s position, on the grounds that the misconduct in this case is so grave that it presents the “exception” under Cleaver-Bascombe that warrants a departure from Bar Counsel’s recommendation. Our analysis below marshals the findings and principles that support disbarment for Respondent’s serious misconduct.

A. Seriousness, Multiple Violations, and Dishonesty

It would be difficult to overstate the seriousness of Respondent’s misconduct. He has admitted to violating six District of Columbia Rules of Professional Conduct—3.3(a) (false statement of fact or law to a tribunal), 3.4(c) (disobeying an obligation under the rules of a tribunal), 3.8(e) (failing to timely disclose evidence that tended to negate the guilt of the accused), 8.4(a) (violating the Rules of Professional Conduct), 8.4(c) (engaging in conduct involving dishonesty, fraud, deceit or misrepresentation; and 8.4(d) (engaging in conduct that seriously interfered with the administration of justice)—in each of three separate cases (Card/Moore, Newton Street Crew, and the Jones matter).²¹ In addition, we have found that ²¹ Notwithstanding the Stipulation, the Committee above found Rule 3.8(e) inapplicable to Respondent’s conduct in relation to the Jones investigation.

Respondent violated Rule 8.4(b) (committing a criminal act that reflects adversely on the lawyer's honesty, trustworthiness, or fitness) through deliberate and repeated false sworn statements and certifications to the government that resulted in the misuse of public funds.

The Committee has found Respondent to have violated the Rules in the following specific ways: (i) by making improper payments to relatives of two key witnesses for their assistance in visiting the witnesses in prison to encourage them to continue to cooperate with, and eventually testify on behalf of, the government; (ii) by intentionally concealing his issuance of witness vouchers out of the wrong court and under the wrong case caption even after he was on notice that this practice was thwarting defense discovery efforts; (iii) by intentionally and improperly issuing witness vouchers to two retired police officers as a means of compensating them for their service to him as "case agents"; (iv) by intentionally and improperly issuing witness vouchers to prisoners covering days when they were incarcerated; (v) by intentionally and improperly issuing witness vouchers to family members who accompanied a child who was cooperating with an investigation during interviews; (vi) by improperly issuing witness vouchers to a police officer from Philadelphia purporting to compensate him for days he did not actually attend; and (vii) by intentionally failing to disclose exculpatory and/or potential impeachment information to criminal defendants whom he was prosecuting as required by law. These violations have resulted not only in substantial expenditures of investigative, administrative, and judicial resources, but also in profound detrimental impacts on the Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew prosecutions.

Broadly speaking, the record reflects two core types of misconduct, misapplication of public funds and failure to disclose information required to be provided to criminal defendants. The Committee finds that the seriousness of the misconduct overwhelms any mitigating factors, including the delay in this case which has been substantial, and supports the sanction of disbarment.

1. Misapplication of Funds

An important initial question in evaluating the seriousness of Respondent’s misconduct for purposes of recommending a sanction is whether and how the Court of Appeals’ jurisprudence concerning misappropriation should be applied to this case.²² Reckless or intentional misappropriation presumptively results in disbarment. See In re Addams, 579 A.2d 190, 191 (D.C. 1990) (en banc). Misappropriation is defined as “any unauthorized use of client’s funds entrusted to [a lawyer], including not only stealing but also unauthorized temporary use for the lawyer’s own purpose, whether or not [he] derives any personal gain or benefit therefrom.” In re Mitrano, 952 A.2d 901, 925 (D.C. 2008) (citations omitted). Respondent’s misconduct falls prima facie within this definition—if the definition applies to government attorneys and the term “client’s funds” applies to public funds entrusted to those attorneys. As the law presently stands, however, it is not at all clear that cases such as this one involving defalcations from public funds should be analyzed as misappropriations. The majority in Cleaver-Bascombe, 892 A.2d at 411-13, for example, declined to treat a Criminal Justice Act voucher improperly submitted by a court-appointed criminal defense attorney as a misappropriation. Judge Glickman, dissenting, would have disbarred the respondent rather than remand, and he relied at least by analogy on the Addams line of cases to support his position. Id. at 413-14. But neither the majority nor the dissent contended that Addams bound the Court outright to order disbarment. And the Board on remand recommended a two-year suspension rather than disbarment pursuant to Addams.

²² Bar Counsel did not charge misappropriation and the matter was not litigated on that footing. On the other hand, there is no doubt that the gravamen of the charges was Respondent’s misuse of public funds, and the Court of Appeals has not taken a formalistic approach to questions of notice in attorney discipline cases, particularly in regard to sanctions. See, e.g., Ukwu, 926 A.2d 1106 at 1113-1114, n.17; In re Austin, 858 A.2d 969, 975-976 (D.C. 2004); In re Hager, 812 A.2d 904, 917 n.14 (D.C. 2002); In re Slattery, 767 A.2d 203, 208-209 (D.C. 2001); In re Haar, 698 A.2d 412, 417 (D.C. 1997); In re Smith, 403 A.2d 296, 300 (D.C. 1979).

Respondent's misconduct here seems no less culpable than many misappropriations, frauds, and thefts that have resulted in disbarment in this jurisdiction. See, e.g., Patterson, 833 A.2d at 493 (conviction for theft of more than $1,000 from U.S. government); In re Ayeni, 822 A.2d 420 (D.C. 2002) (misappropriation in multiple cases and CJA voucher fraud); In re Caplan, 691 A.2d 1152, 1152 (D.C. 1997) ("Criminal offenses involving theft and fraud inherently involve moral turpitude.") (disbarment); In re Bond, 519 A.2d 165 (D.C. 1986) (disbarment for wire fraud).

Patterson is instructive. The respondent in that case plead guilty to theft in violation of 18 U.S.C. § 641, which, as noted above, makes it a felony to "embezzle[], steal[], purloin[], or knowingly convert[] to his use or the use of another, or without authority, sell[], convey[] or dispose[] of any record, voucher, money, or thing of value of the United States or any department or agency thereof" in excess of $1,000. Patterson, 833 A.2d at 493. Based on the guilty plea, the Court found that Patterson had been convicted of a crime of moral turpitude per se and ordered him disbarred pursuant to D.C. Code § 11-2503(a) (disbarment on the basis of conviction for crime involving moral turpitude). Id. Although we do not find that disbarment per se is appropriate in this case in the absence of a criminal conviction, on the equities we see no compelling reason why Respondent, who "paid" Detectives Belisle and Fluck alone with nearly $15,000 of improper witness vouchers, should receive qualitatively different treatment from Patterson. See also In re Tillerson, 878 A.2d 1186, 1186 (D.C. 2005) (citing Patterson and finding disbarment per se appropriate for felony theft conviction under D.C. law).

The Court of Appeals has confronted cases in which the Addams rule either did not apply or did not clearly apply, but the misconduct so resembled misappropriation or other disbarment offenses as to require the same result. In In re Slattery, 767 A.2d 203 (D.C. 2001), for example, the respondent held funds as a trustee rather than through an attorney-client relationship, and in that capacity he diverted the funds (about $10,000) to his own use. Id. at 206. The Court found violations of Rule 8.4(b) and (c) and ordered the respondent disbarred. Id. at 213-14, 219. The Court observed that “there is a structural similarity between the attorney-client fiduciary relationship sought to be protected in Addams and the trustee relationship of Slattery At the very least, the near-automatic rule of disbarment of Addams signals the seriousness with which the disciplinary system should deal with an attorney’s deliberate taking of fiduciary funds to convert them to a personal use.”²³ Slattery, 767 A.2d at 216. We think the same can be said here. A government lawyer’s misapplication of public funds entrusted to his control implicates many of the same regulatory interests as misappropriation of funds or outright theft from a private client. Certainly, it is no less dishonest. The Court has emphasized that the misappropriated funds need not benefit the lawyer as opposed to a third party, and we see nothing that would suggest a narrower rule in this context. Cf. 18 U.S.C. § 641 (crime occurs when defendant “converts [government funds] to his use or the use of another”).

In re Gil, 656 A.2d 303 (D.C. 1995), is to similar effect. In that case, the respondent agreed to assist a friend of 15 years by seeing to the transfer of some of her assets, and then stole the assets, forging various signatures in the process. See Gil, 656 A.2d at 304. The Court concluded that Gil had committed larceny, found violations of Rule 8.4(b) and (c), and ordered him disbarred, observing that “[m]isappropriation . . . of a client’s (or other) funds . . . demonstrates absence of the basic qualities for membership in the legal profession. . . .” Id. at 306 (quoting In re Minninberg, 485 A.2d 149, 151 (D.C. 1984)). Because the Court “agree[d] with the Board that respondent violated Rules 8.4(b) and (c) and that his misconduct was grave enough to require disbarment,” it did “not decide whether respondent acted in the course of an attorney-client relationship or whether the existence of that relationship is a pre-condition to a violation of Rule 1.15.” Id. at 304. As in Slattery and Gil, we see no persuasive reason why the technical inapplicability of the Addams rule (or a statute mandating disbarment) should require a lesser sanction than disbarment.

We find some helpful guidance in In re Pennington, 921 A.2d 135 (D.C. 2007). The respondent in that case was disbarred in Maryland for lying to her clients about the source of a $10,000 payment made to them in connection with a lawsuit that Pennington was handling for them. Id. at 137-39. There had been a problem with the filing of the clients’ complaint in the personal injury matter, allowing the statute of limitations to run. Id. at 137. Because the clients had previously authorized a settlement offer of $10,000, Pennington paid them that amount from her own funds, without revealing the problem that had occurred with the complaint, and provided them with a false “Statement of Settlement” that led them to believe that the $10,000 had been paid by the defendant’s insurer. Id. at 138-39. The D.C. Court of Appeals declined to follow the Maryland Court’s disbarment, concluding that a two-year suspension with a fitness requirement was the appropriate sanction in this jurisdiction. Id. at 142-45. Like Pennington, Respondent here did not pocket the proceeds of any of his wrongful acts. However, unlike Pennington, Respondent’s “client,” or in any event the public, suffered direct financial harm when he used public funds for his own purposes. And unlike Pennington, who spent her own funds to effectuate the scheme, Respondent chose to misapply public monies. Particularly in view of the widespread, repeated, deliberate, and dishonest character of Respondent's actions, we find his misconduct to be considerably more serious than that addressed in Pennington.

Finally, we consider disbarment to be consistent with the outcome in Cleaver-Bascombe. The Court in that case emphasized that attorneys who accept CJA funds “are expected to be scrupulously honest and to exercise a high degree of care in completing their vouchers, which are paid out of taxpayer funds, and which are submitted to the court under penalty of perjury.” 892 A.2d at 398. The same can be said of witness vouchers. Indeed, Judge Glickman emphasized that, in order to provide adequate general deterrence, “the severity of a sanction should take into account the difficulty of detecting and proving the misconduct at issue” and argued that disbarment without remand was warranted “because inflated vouchers are difficult to detect and prove.” Id. at 414. This is even more true in the case of witness vouchers, which are not scrutinized by the court like CJA vouchers but rather paid by the USMS without any review other than to determine that the AUSA has endorsed the voucher form. Although we have not found that Respondent has provided perjured testimony to this Hearing Committee as Cleaver-Bascombe was found to have done, he did engage in substantial dishonest conduct before two courts in the course of the underlying conduct as set out in detail above. Cleaver-Bascombe's conduct was also relatively isolated, pertaining to billing entries in a single case and on a single voucher, and the overall amount of CJA compensation questioned was only $725. Id. at 400. By contrast, Respondent used scores of false submissions to improperly procure tens of thousands of dollars.

Because we consider Respondent's misconduct to be substantially more egregious than Cleaver-Bascombe's, we believe that disbarment in this matter is consistent with the two-year suspension and fitness requirement recommended by the Board upon remand in that case. In re Cleaver-Bascombe, Bar Docket Number 183-02 at 9 (BPR July 21, 2006). In reaching that recommendation, the Board observed that if Ms. Cleaver-Bascombe had prepared the CJA voucher accurately "she could have billed something close to (and perhaps more than) the $725 amount that she actually billed." Id. at 4. No such argument is available here: it is undisputed that Respondent claimed many thousands of dollars without any legal justification. Moreover, the Board observed at the end of its Supplemental Report and Recommendation that "this appears to be a case of first impression" and that "[i]t may be that the Court will decide that Respondent's violations are so strikingly similar to misappropriation that disbarment is the presumptive sanction." Id. at 9.

Disbarment could thus be amply justified on this record solely on the basis of Respondent's misapplications of public funds through the issuance of false witness vouchers. But those misapplications are not, in the Committee's view, the most serious aspect of his misconduct: Respondent's intentional and repeated violations of his obligations to disclose exculpatory and bias-related information to the criminal defendants whom he was prosecuting.

2. Failure to provide Brady and/or Giglio information.

The Supreme Court stated in Brady in 1967 that "[s]ociety wins not only when the guilty are convicted, but when criminal trials are fair; our system of the administration of justice suffers when any accused is treated unfairly." Brady, 373 U.S. at 87 ("The United States wins its point whenever justice is done its citizens in the courts."). The commentary to Rule 3.8 echoes Brady's axiom that a prosecutor owes a duty to society beyond obtaining convictions: “The prosecutor has the responsibility of a minister of justice and not simply that of an advocate. This responsibility carries with it specific obligations to see that the defendant is accorded procedural justice and that guilt is decided upon the basis of sufficient evidence.” D.C. R. Prof. Cond. 3.8 cmt. [1]. Respondent’s Stipulations relating to Brady and Giglio and his extraordinary admission of this misconduct are set out in the discussion above of the Rule 3.8(e) charge. We will not repeat the Stipulations or the full colloquy here. In sum, Respondent admitted, inter alia, having performed a mental “calculus” in which he unilaterally balanced the rights of the criminal defendants to Brady and/or Giglio information against his own assessment of the likelihood that harm might come to his cooperators if their identities were divulged to the defendants. Respondent has stipulated and testified that he was required to turn this information over to the defense, and he concedes that he had the ability to put the question before the judge in the case but decided on his own not to do so. It is also apparent that Respondent made dishonest and improper efforts to conceal his activities in respect of witness payments, making false or misleading statements to the court and to opposing counsel on the record, and adducing false or misleading testimony from witnesses about their receipt of benefits from the government.

The Committee has concluded that at some point Respondent became aware that his practice of issuing of vouchers out of the wrong court and under the wrong caption was frustrating defense discovery efforts, yet he chose to continue to conceal the practice, further frustrating those efforts. Respondent knew that his opposing counsel in the Card/Moore matter were attempting to subpoena information concerning payments to a witnesses from the Superior Court, see, e.g., BX 23 at 317; Tr. 453-55, 481, 519-20, yet he made no effort to notify counsel that these and other withheld vouchers had been issued improperly out of the federal court. Respondent was at that point clearly on notice that his practice of systematically issuing witness vouchers out of the wrong court was thwarting defense discovery efforts in one instance and potentially in many others. He also knew that the practice was needlessly and substantially wasteful of his opposing counsels' and the court's limited time and resources. See BX 23 at 316-17. Yet he took no action to correct his conduct.

In multiple instances, Respondent compounded his discovery violations by making false and/or misleading statements to the court and adducing false or misleading testimony from witnesses before the jury. See BX 1, ¶ 16 (stipulation that Respondent "repeatedly and falsely assured the court and defense counsel that he had provided all Brady and Giglio information to the defense" in Card/Moore matter). We have already discussed the testimony of Theresa Bryant/Greene, adduced by Respondent, to the effect that she had only received witness vouchers for three Grand Jury appearances when in fact Respondent had recently given her twelve vouchers, totaling $480, that were not related to those appearances. We have also discussed Respondent's evasive and misleading conduct in stating, under inquiry from opposing counsel, that government witness Calvin Bears had not received any witness vouchers, omitting to mention that Mr. Bears' girlfriend had by that time received several hundred dollars' worth of vouchers. Tr. 457-58; BX 25 at 333-34; BX 35. Other examples are evident in the record. For example, Respondent's direct examination of Frank Lynch in the Newton Street Crew case appeared to provide a catalog of the benefits he received from the government, including not only his plea and cooperation agreements but also items such as receiving lunch during visits with prosecutors, permission to use the telephone, and family visits. BX 55; cf. BX 56 at 504-05 (similar testimony on cross-examination). But the examination omitted any mention of payments to Michelle Washington, Lynch's girlfriend and the mother of his child, amounting to $7,392, to his sister Karen Lynch amounting to $1,008, to his mother Helen Lynch amounting to $126, and to his father Frank Lynch, Sr. amounting to $546, as of the date of the testimony. See BX 55, 71, 72, 73, 79.

Although there are no original D.C. disciplinary cases involving a prosecutor's failure to provide discovery in violation of Rule 3.8(e), the Court did address an analogous violation in a recent reciprocal discipline case, In re Stuart, 942 A.2d 1118 (D.C. 2008). The respondent in that matter, an Assistant District Attorney in Queens County, New York, failed to produce to the defense a police report concerning a witness believed to have exculpatory information in a homicide case, falsely represented to the court that he did not know the witness's whereabouts, and failed to correct the misrepresentations during the trial, causing the matter to have to be retried. Id. at 1119. The New York Court suspended the respondent for three years for violating New York Disciplinary Rule 1-102(a)(4), (5), (7). Matter of Stuart, 803 N.Y.S.2d 577, 577-78 (App. Div. 2d Dep't 2005). Given the strong presumption of identical reciprocal discipline, the Court imposed a three-year suspension with a requirement to prove fitness. Stuart, 942 A.2d at 1120-21. The Court of Appeals acknowledged that the respondent's misconduct could have merited disbarment in this jurisdiction if considered as an original disciplinary matter. Id. at 1120. Judge Nebeker dissented, stating that the three-year suspension with fitness "does not go far enough" and that he would remand to the Board "for proceedings leading to possible disbarment." Id. at 1122. Judge Kramer wrote separately to express agreement with Judge Nebeker that a prosecutor who makes misrepresentations to the court, withholding possibly exculpatory evidence from the defense, "deserves more than a three-year sanction and serious consideration of disbarment," but ultimately concluded that the deference required in reciprocal cases militated in favor of the three-year suspension with fitness. Id. at 1121. The Court’s analysis in Stuart, in which there was a single misrepresentation to the court and a single instance of failure to disclose information, strongly supports disbarment in this case, which involves far more extensive dishonesty and prosecutorial misconduct. Id. at 1121.

A number of cases not involving Rule 3.8(e) or failure to disclose Brady or Giglio information also offer some guidance, particularly as regards misrepresentations to the Court and opposing counsel. In In re Corizzi, 803 A.2d 438 (D.C. 2002), for example, the respondent urged two clients to lie under oath in their depositions so that they would not reveal that the respondent had a reciprocal referral relationship with a chiropractor who was acting as an expert in their cases. Id. at 440. Corizzi had also failed to report settlement offers to a client, lied to opposing counsel and the court about the timing of his engagement as counsel, and lied to Bar Counsel. Id. The Court disbarred Corizzi, stating that “[d]ishonesty is at the heart of the respondent’s violations, and honesty continues to be an ‘indispensable component of our judicial system.’” Id. at 442 (quoting In re Mason, 736 A.2d 1019, 1024 (D.C. 1999)). The Court observed that Corizzi’s instruction to his clients to lie virtually destroyed their prospects of recovery in their personal injury actions and exposed them to potential prosecution for perjury. Id. at 440. Similarly, in this case, Respondent’s abuse of the witness voucher system and concealment of his witness voucher payments (which included eliciting false and misleading testimony from witnesses concerning benefits provided to them by the government) resulted in extensive litigation and, ultimately, substantially reduced sentences for the Card/Moore and Newton Street Crew defendants. Although the analogy is not perfect, we find some guidance in Corizzi.

We also find some basis for comparison of Respondent's misconduct to that found in In re Parshall, 878 A.2d 1253 (D.C. 2005), a reciprocal discipline case in which a Department of Justice attorney submitted a false status report, along with fabricated supporting documents, to a federal district court. Id. at 1254. The attorney resigned from the Justice Department and was reprimanded by the Maryland Court of Appeals. Id. The D.C. Court of Appeals adopted the Board's recommendation to depart from the Maryland sanction and imposed an 18-month suspension. Id. at 1255. As with Cleaver-Bascombe and this case, the submission of false information to a court was a very serious matter. Parshall's misconduct was isolated, however, consisting of a single false submission. His misconduct also did not involve the misuse of client or public funds. And he had never been subject to discipline in twenty years of law practice. Id. at 1254 n.4. Respondent in the present matter, by contrast, engaged in widespread dishonest conduct and misapplied many thousands of dollars of public funds. We find these distinguishing factors to be more than sufficient to account for the difference between the 18-month suspension imposed in Parshall and the more severe sanction of disbarment recommended here. Compare id. with Goffe, 641 A.2d at 465 (disbarment where "repeated fabrication and falsification of documents and related lying created the prospect of injustice and unfair advantage with respect to a range of government institutions as well as to private individuals") (sanction covered additional areas of misconduct).

Similarly, we find the misconduct reflected in this record to be qualitatively more serious than that addressed in Powell, 898 A.2d 365. Powell had been convicted of a misdemeanor in Virginia and had been suspended from practice on an interim basis in the District of Columbia, yet he failed to disclose his D.C. bar membership or his interim suspension in an application for admission to the bar of the United States District Court for the District of Colorado. Id. at 365-66. The Court issued an order to show cause why Powell should not be disbarred. Id. at 366. The Board recommended, and the Court adopted, a suspension of one year with a requirement to prove fitness as a condition of reinstatement. Id. Unlike Powell, who made one false submission to a court, Respondent in this case has made numerous false submissions, has made multiple false or misleading statements to courts on the record, and has adduced false or misleading testimony in multiple cases. These distinctions are more than sufficient to justify the difference between the one-year suspension with fitness imposed in Powell and the sanction of disbarment.

In sum, the misconduct reflected in this record appears capable of supporting disbarment either on the basis of the Respondent's defalcations from public funds entrusted to his control or on the basis of his prosecutorial misconduct relating to Brady and Giglio violations. Taken together, and particularly in consideration of the extensive dishonesty involved, the Committee believes that the record in this matter amply supports the sanction of disbarment.

B. Prejudice to the Client

Respondent's extensive misconduct resulted not only in a substantial expenditure of investigative time and effort by the Department of Justice's Office of Professional Responsibility and the Office of Bar Counsel, but also in an extensive motions practice, and the renegotiation and substantial reduction of sentences for a number of extremely serious criminals. In the wake of Respondent's misconduct, the United States Attorney agreed to the following sentence reductions, which were approved by the presiding courts:

Mark Hoyle

original sentence: 8 life terms, plus 25 years
amended sentence: 28 years

John McCollough

original sentence: 9 life terms, plus 85 years
amended sentence: 28 years

Anthony Goldston

original sentence: 4 life terms, plus 5 years
amended sentence: 18 years, concurrent with Superior Court sentences

Mario Harris

original sentence: 5 life terms, plus 25 years
amended sentence: 18 years

Antoine Rice

original sentence: 40 years-life with a mandatory minimum of 25 years;
amended sentence: 5 to 15 years.

Javier Card

original sentence: 69 years to life;
amended sentence: 23 years to life, with the execution of all but 23 years suspended.

Jerome Edwards

original sentence: 61 years to life, mandatory minimum of 30 years;
amended sentence: 23 years to life, with the execution of all but 23 years suspended.

Donnie Strothers

original sentence: 30 years
amended judgment: 14 ½ years

William Hoyle

original sentence: 30 years
amended sentence: 14 ½ years

Respondent has indeed acknowledged that the government perceived a “substantial risk that the [Newton Street Crew] convictions could be set aside, that the collateral attack hearings could be embarrassing, and [that] they could be facing a complicated re-trial ten years after the original complicated trial.” Response at 20. But cf. id. at 20 n.20 (asserting that concerns were exaggerated based on OPR report).

In addition, prosecutorial misconduct on this scale is, in the Committee’s estimation, extremely serious. The prosecutorial obligations set out in Brady and its progeny rest on a foundation of trust: the defense and the court must be able to rely on a prosecutor’s word that he or she has provided the requisite disclosures. Respondent’s conduct breached that trust, thwarted the criminal discovery process and undermined the integrity of our system of justice.

C. Prior Discipline

Respondent has been the subject of prior discipline in New Mexico. See In re Howes, 123 N.M. 311 (1997) (BX 101). In that case, the New Mexico Supreme Court publically censured Respondent, finding that he had inappropriate contacts with [a represented] defendant directly on at least six (6) separate occasions and on numerous other occasions through an intermediary ([a] detective). Although defendant initiated the contacts, respondent’s repeated willingness to accept defendant’s calls and his statement in open court (after defendant’s attorney had objected to contacts between defendant and the detective outside of her presence) to the effect that “If he [defendant] wants to call us, we will take his call” indicate that he encouraged and perpetuated the communications and that his actions were intentional rather than the result of negligence or ignorance.

Id. at 322. The violation occurred in late 1988, in the early stages of what became a dispute between the Justice Department and state bar associations about the applicability of local bar rules to federal prosecutors in general and the permissibility of prosecutors’ contact with certain represented persons in particular. Respondent had obtained the backing of his superiors within the USAO before taking the actions for which he was charged with ethical violations, and the Department supported Respondent in the New Mexico disciplinary proceeding and issued letters affirming its approval of his conduct. See Tr. 1002-03; RX 13, 14.²⁴

refuses to this day to accept or even recognize the wrongful nature of his conduct. (ABA Standard 9.22[g]). When asked at one point whether, if put in the same position again he would do the same thing, respondent replied in the negative. His answer, however, appears to have been based more upon his annoyance at having become the subject of disciplinary charges than upon any remorse for his actions, as he went on to say:

I would never put myself in a position again to be a guinea pig, a test case, whether or not [the chief of the felony section] gave me the right directions, whether or not the Attorney General or the Thornburgh Memorandum, whether or not the District of Columbia Court of Appeals two years later said what happened was—if it was constitutional, it was proper. I would never again put myself in a position where so many authorities would second-guess what I thought I had done reasonably and within the bounds of my professional responsibilities.

Respondent then proceeded to remove any remaining doubt about whether or not he acknowledges that his actions were improper:

When you asked me if I would ever do this again, my answer was not to say that what I did then was wrong. I believe I was ethical and proper under those circumstances. And I would, given the same circumstances today, without any other changes, if this happened again, I would do the same thing. I wouldn't change.

We believe respondent's comments indicate a lack of appreciation for the importance of the duty at issue. We are not persuaded that he "was simply caught in a dispute."

Howes, 123 N.M. at 322. Before the Hearing Committee, Respondent reiterated his position that the New Mexico disciplinary proceedings represented a "national test case." Tr. 1002, ²⁴ Indeed, the Department of Justice filed a federal suit challenging the New Mexico Supreme Court's jurisdiction to conduct disciplinary proceedings against Respondent. The federal court found that the New Mexico Supreme Court had jurisdiction to discipline Respondent for his conduct while a federal prosecutor. See Howes, 123 N.M. at 315 (citing In re Doe, 801 F. Supp. 478 (D.N.M. 1992) and United States v. Ferrara, 847 F. Supp. 964 (D.D.C. 1993), aff'd, 54 F.3d 825 (1995)).

The Committee has considered the matter and, although the New Mexico Court's statements concededly cause us some concern, we are not inclined to rely on the New Mexico public censure, which relates to conduct that occurred more than twenty years ago, as an aggravating factor. There was debate concerning the federal government's power to preempt state ethics regulations in general, and federal prosecutors' ability to have contact with represented persons in particular. Attorney General Richard Thornburgh sanctioning the practice in 1989, (see Doe, 801 F. Supp. at 486 (BX 114)), the Department of Justice issued a confirming federal regulation under Attorney General Janet Reno in 1994,²⁵ the so-called McDade Amendment reversing the position in 1998,²⁶ and numerous efforts to repeal the amendment since then. Prior to 1998, there was a good deal of heated criticism of the Department's policy by local bar associations and courts, of which the judicial decisions leading to Respondent's discipline were prominent examples. Indeed, the decisions make little effort to conceal that their principal target is a policy of the Justice Department.²⁷ In any event, in view of the passage of more than twenty years since the conduct in question and the indisputably unusual context in which the conduct arose, we are not inclined to consider this prior discipline as an aggravating factor.

²⁷ See, e.g., Doe, 801 F. Supp. at 487 ("It is understandable that an AUSA would construe the Thornburgh Memorandum to permit or even mandate unethical behavior. But it is 'alarming' that the principal law enforcement officer of this country would issue a memorandum purporting to authorize unethical behavior. . . ."); id. at 488 ("Before issuing his memorandum, Attorney General Thornburgh would have done well to have taken a few steps from his office to contemplate the inscription on the rotunda wall"); see also Howes, 123 N.M. at 316 (New Mexico Supreme Court's holding that USAO's authorization of Respondent's conduct does not absolve him of ethical violation because "there was no 'arguable question of professional duty' requiring resolution").

D. Acknowledgement of Wrongdoing

Respondent's acceptance of responsibility in this matter is partial and conflicted. Although Respondent is to be credited for stipulating to many relevant facts and numerous rule violations, we cannot find that Respondent has acknowledged that his conduct was wrongful. While Respondent can point to instances in which he testified that his actions were wrong, and he is responsible for his actions, his testimony suggests that he is not convinced that his conduct was, in fact, wrongful. For instance, when asked if the attestation on a certain witness voucher was true or accurate, Respondent answered, "I know now that, if I have to comply under the C.F.R. and the U.S.C. regs that have been stipulated to, it was wrong if that is the law." Tr. 1041 (emphasis added). When specifically pressed as to whether he was taking responsibility for his misconduct, Respondent testified that he is responsible for this actions, and if those actions were wrong, then he was wrong. This is a far cry from accepting responsibility:

Q You stipulated that you knowingly made a false statement of material fact or law to a tribunal.

A And that would be, as far as I saw, the miscaptioning of vouchers and paying of witnesses under the C.F.R. and U.S.C. provisions and if they were the law, then I was wrong.

Q You keep saying "if they were the law" and you didn't see them at that time, so how can you knowingly make a false statement of material fact if you didn't even know that you were suppose[d] to do a voucher a certain way?

A Well, I think that I am a lawyer and ignorance of the law is no defense.

Q Yes, that is for sure.

A If that is the law, then I'm wrong.

Q But there is a big difference between saying, if that's the law, then I'm wrong and saying when I made this material, this false statement of material fact I made it knowingly, knowing it was false.

A I signed vouchers and as you've heard me testify about my conduct. I can only tell you, as I have since yesterday, the common custom and practice of the office and if that custom and practice was in violation of statutes and regulations, then I knowingly broke the law because I signed the vouchers.

Q That's what you think Rule 3.3(a) means.

A Probably among other things.

Q That if that's the law, if I did it contrary to law, then I violated that rule.

A I guess.

Q You think that's taking responsibility for doing something knowingly?

A As I've said, Ms. Herman, I take responsibility for my actions in this case. You know, I signed my name. However it happened, if it was wrong, it is my responsibility.

Tr. 1252-54 (emphases added).

Respondent argues at page 3 that this and similar testimony reflect merely an observation that his use of vouchers may have been allowed under certain statutes:

Bar Counsel claims [Respondent's] use of "if" shows a lack of acceptance of responsibility. In fact, Respondent is just stating the obvious. He has readily admitted that a large percentage of the vouchers he signed or authorized cannot be justified by 28 U.S.C. § 1821. But since Bar Counsel has not established that § 1821 is the sole and exclusive authority for issuing vouchers, and in fact the evidence plainly shows that vouchers can be issued under other provisions including 28 U.S.C. § 524, then Mr. Howes statement is perfectly logical. It hardly shows a limited acceptance of responsibility; it simply reflects Bar Counsel's inadequate case.

Response at 3. Having witnessed Respondent's cross-examination, we cannot agree with him that his use of "if" in the testimony quoted above reflected simply an acknowledgement that some statutes might allow his behavior. He and Bar Counsel were not engaged in a debate over the statutes applicable to his conduct. He was trying to explain how he was accepting responsibility for his conduct. Indeed, as made clear in the above-quoted testimony, Respondent argued repeatedly that he did not think that he had done anything wrong because he complied with standard practice within the USAO: "I can only tell you, as I have since yesterday, the common custom and practice of the office and if that custom and practice was in violation of statutes and regulations, then I knowingly broke the law because I signed the vouchers.” Tr. 1253 (emphasis added).

As was the case in New Mexico ten years ago, Respondent appears to believe that he has been singled out in this disciplinary proceeding, when he was simply doing what all other prosecutors were doing:

I handed these kinds of vouchers to hundreds of witnesses in [the] course of my almost 12 years in the office, 11 plus years in the office, as was the custom and practice in the office across the street [(the USAO)] throughout the that time. If we are held, from [Bar Counsel’s] standpoint, to it had to be a proceeding and that [witnesses] were compelled to appear, then I was wrong and every Assistant U.S. Attorney that handed one of these for something that wasn’t in trial at the moment or in the Superior Court Grand Jury, they were wrong.

Tr. 1127; see also Tr. 1289 (“You’ve heard my bosses say, and if you are to adhere to what those certifications say and what those regulations say, then we were wrong all along.”) (emphasis added). Indeed, echoing the “national test case” theme from the New Mexico proceeding, Respondent testified that he was the “poster boy for this matter.” Tr.1121.

Perhaps most troublingly, Respondent suggested twice that if this Committee found that he committed ethics violations through his misuse of witness vouchers—which is required given his stipulations—we would impair the ability of current AUSAs to investigate and prosecute crimes:

And if the state of the law is those regulations applied, then we were absolutely wrong, had been wrong since long before this case.

HEARING CHAIR GLASSMAN: Let me stop you there. You’ve said that several times now, “if that is the state of the law.” Do you have a doubt that the 28 U.S.C. and C.F.R. provisions are the law?

THE WITNESS: Well, I understand them to be the law. What I am saying is, given the custom and practice of the U.S. Attorney’s Office, me included, having never considered that that was the limitations [sic] and what I believe, sir, that if you were to decide in my case is that [(compliance with applicable regulations)] is the only way you can provide these witness vouchers, you will shut down for every D.C. prosecutor and any member of the D.C. bar the ability to do grand jury originals and a variety of other investigations that have been the life's blood of that office for years. That's my only statement about those regulations.

Tr. 1288-89 (emphasis added).

I can't think of anybody that I worked with in 11 years that would have known the two regulations [applicable to witness vouchers] and the limitations and would have applied them. I learned how to do drug cases and then learned how to do murder cases and in many ways what you've heard about this case was unique, sui generis and as you heard Mr. Shertler say, it became sort of the exemplar for how these related homicide cases were done. But I didn't know the limitations and that was my only context, sir. That's my reference about the law. I should have known. I'm charged with knowing the law. But my only point was, if that is—indeed, it is the law, then that office across the street [(the United States Attorneys' Office)] is going to not need as many people to work because there won't be a whole host of things being done, given the limitations of the law.

Tr.1292-93 (emphasis added). Respondent's testimony demonstrates that Respondent still does not understand the seriousness of his misconduct, and most disturbingly, suggests that he believes that the law may be ignored where compliance with the law would limit an otherwise laudatory goal.

E. Circumstances in Mitigation

The Committee has considered several factors in mitigation of Respondent's misconduct. These include (i) his record of law practice before, during, and after the violations, (ii) numerous testimonials in the record to his good character, and (iii) delay.²⁸ With regard to Respondent's record of law practice, we accept that he was an exceptionally tenacious and talented prosecutor with a strong work ethic, and that he handled some of the office's most complex and challenging matters.²⁹ Tr. 645-46; RX 1(a). On the other hand, we find that this record was marred by serious wrongdoing, and we are not inclined to consider it as a significant mitigating factor in these circumstances. It does appear that Respondent's post-violation law practice has been free of disciplinary incident, and he has adduced an impressive array of testaments to his honesty, integrity, and good character. Against the backdrop of the extremely serious misconduct reflected in this record, however, we find that these considerations have only some, but not significant, mitigating force.

The Court of Appeals has said that, for delay to be considered as a mitigating factor in determining an appropriate sanction, the circumstances must be "unique and compelling." In re Fowler, 642 A.2d 1327, 1331 (D.C. 1994) ("While we do not venture to opine under what circumstances time delay may properly mitigate an otherwise appropriate sanction, we do express the view that the circumstances of the individual case must be sufficiently unique and compelling to justify lessening what would otherwise be the sanction necessary to protect the public interest."). A 2005 decision further suggests that delay-based mitigation is only appropriate when there are other significant mitigating factors. See In re Ponds, 888 A.2d 234, 240-44 (D.C. 2005). These statements may foreclose the possibility of mitigation in this case: we have found that there are no other significant mitigating factors.

We will nevertheless assume arguendo that mitigation on the basis of delay is not foreclosed categorically by Ponds or otherwise in this case. The delay in this case has been, by any measure, extraordinary. The misconduct in issue occurred principally in 1993-1995, i.e., in the range of fifteen years ago. We are aware of no other case even approaching this length of time from conduct to disposition, and the Board's and Court's actions still lie ahead. Even assuming, however, that delay-based mitigation is a concept fully operative in this case and that the delay is substantially mitigating, disbarment would still be appropriate. As we see it, the seriousness of Respondent's misconduct is such that even mitigating factors on this order of substantiality should not alter the recommended sanction. Respondent has argued that the pendency of this matter has inhibited his ability to practice, in particular by requiring him to play a non-speaking role in the Enron class action in which he has been lead counsel. It might also be said, however, that but for the delay complained of Respondent would not have had the opportunity to participate in the litigation.

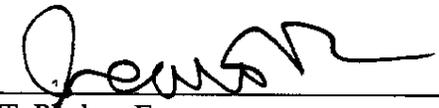

Conclusion

For the foregoing reasons, the Committee finds that Respondent committed multiple violations of Rules 3.3(a), 3.4(c), 3.8(e), 8.4(a), 8.4(b), 8.4(c), and 8.4(d). Mr. Phalen recommends that Respondent be suspended for at least two years, and that he demonstrate his fitness to practice before being readmitted to the bar. This recommendation is based entirely on Bar Counsel's recommended sanction. Were it not for the fact that Bar Counsel considered, and rejected, disbarment as a sanction, Mr. Phalen would have recommended disbarment. Mr. Barker concludes that the gravity of the misconduct in this matter compels disbarment, notwithstanding Bar Counsel's recommendation of a lesser sanction. Respondent's attention should be drawn to the requirements of D.C. Bar R. XI § 14, and their effect on eligibility for reinstatement. See id. § 16(c).
